Bruno Ridicule For Wilentz Is Glaring

HAUPTMANN IS CONFIDENT HE MADE SHOWING

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 26.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann fortified his defences today while the prosecution rolled up new ammunition for its savage attack on his denial that he kidnapped and killed the Lindbergh baby.

Court was in recess, but it was only an armed truce as the defendant studied his stock trading records to account for his affluence after the $50 000 ransom was paid, as his lawyers went to inspect his home in the Bronx, and as state attorneys studied the weak points in his defence.

"He is vulnerable, very vulnerable," said Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who hammered at Hauptmann during the murder trial defendant's first half hour of cross-examination yesterday.

"Wait until we get really started," the attorney general advised.

HAUPTMANN HAUGHTY

Hauptmann was almost contemptuous in his remarks about Wilentz.

"It seems that the attorney general was trying to get me excited," said the carpenter. "All I can say is that he will have to try a lot harder. I am on to that because I have been told how the prosecution lawyers act. It just won't work. It's no use."

Although Hauptmann appeared shaken when he left the stand yesterday, he voiced satisfaction with the impression he made on the eight men and four women who hold his life in their hands.

State attorneys expressed confidence that the searching, lengthy cross-examination it mapped for Monday would leave Hauptmann a discredited witness, his alibis riddled.

EXPECT NO QUARTER

Throughout the defendant's direct examination the prosecution lawyers and their various experts carefully noted each weak point as it appeared. It is with these notes that Wilentz will go to work Monday.

Hauptmann was spending the week-end recess preparing for the clash in which he can expect no quarter. The lean German turned accountant again. He studied his financial records because the state will strive to show the jury that the Lindbergh ransom financed the Hauptmann stock market manipulations.

Cross and redirect examination appeared certain to keep Hauptmann on the stand all day.

Life Must Be Taken Seriously

With deadly earnestness, Bruno Hauptmann confers with the chief of his counsel, Edward J. Reilly, as shown here in two courtroom poses, while the state piles up evidence to show that the stolid carpenter was the Lindbergh abductor. The defendant continually turns to Reilly to offer suggestions.

RELIEF DENIAL ENDS IN WILD ORGY OF DEATH

Mother and Son in Despair Over Need Run Amok With Gun

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—Leaving the body of a slain relief worker in their home, a crippled youth and his mother went gunning into a divisional relief headquarters late today, fatally wounded one worker, shot two others and then fired their last bullets into their own brains.

The killers, apparently maddened by the withdrawal of relief, were R. W. Arden, 25, and his mother, Mrs. Ruth Arden, about 50.

FIND ANOTHER VICTIM

An hour after the wild shooting orgy at the West Chicago avenue relief station, officers broke into the Arden home and found Miss Alice Erwin, about 22, dead of a bullet through the head. Miss Erwin was a case worker who had called on the couple.

SHOOT-UP STAFF

From their home Arden and his mother had proceeded to the relief headquarters where they met Neil A. Neilson, 40, a vocational adviser. The mother and son pulled out an old revolver and an automatic pistol and started shooting.

Nielson, shot in the arm and leg, dropped.

Bullets raked the office.

Miss Caroline Wallace, superintendent, was shot in the abdomen and died in hospital. Miss Hazel Dugan, stenographer, was the third victim.

50 FLEE FIRE IN NIGHTIES

KENTVILLE, N.S., Jan. 26.—Fifty persons were driven from their homes in night attire early today as fire swept through five buildings in the heart of downtown Kentville and threatened for a time to wipe out the town's business section.

Firemen, working in intense cold, brought the flames under control only after they had eaten through $65,000 worth of property including a three-storey tenement house—the second largest building in town—a bakery, a clothing store, a barber shop and a bookstore.

BRITAIN IS HIT BY ICY BLAST

LONDON, Jan. 26—Icy winds roared over Great Britain today in one of the season's worst storms, causing at least one death, smashing fishing boats, and tumbling chimneys and trees.

Anxiety was felt for the Norwegian ship Ganga which was blown out to sea at midnight while making Blyth Harbor and has not been seen or heard of since. The 2,243-ton Norwegian steamer Rondo went aground at Mull of Islay, on the west coast of Scotland.

London got late touches of snow which left the suburbs white.

TODAY'S ODDEST NEWS

ESKIMO PROVES APT STUDENT OF AVIATION

SEATTLE, Jan. 26. — Three weeks before coming to Seattle, John Dull, 17, an Eskimo, had never seen a movie or a telephone and had never ridden in a car or elevator, but he made a solo flight at Boeing field here after one hour and 26 minutes of dual instruction. The lad will help his father, a fur trader, by transporting the precious fur cargoes by air over the frozen wastes of the northland.

Three Prowlers, Three Radios, Three Arrests

WINNIPEG, Jan. 26.—If police are right, Ann McGregor and Rose Lepyre were active young women. With a male friend, they roamed the streets in men's attire, doing a little burgling on the side.

The three were unable to explain why they were walking at four in the morning each carrying a radio. They're held in $2,000 bail.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 26. — It was so hot in the Taica Curico section Friday night that residents, unable to sleep in their homes, stayed out in the street.

ALD. CRANG IS ACTING MAYOR

The youngest acting mayor in the history of this fair city, Ald. Margaret Crang took over the administrative reins in the chief magistrate's chair Saturday morning. Miss Crang acted in the capicity of deputy mayor until February 1 and during the absence of Mayor Joseph A. Clarke at Calgary.

Ald. Crang

Asked by a Bulletin reporter (who, by the way, went to school with her) how she felt about her new position, Madam Mayor replied, with a laugh: "Why, I'm simply overwhelmed!"

As part of her official duties, Ald. Crang interviewed departmental officials Saturday and announced to the press that her engagements for the evening included the opening of a skating rink in Bonnie Doon and the presentation of prizes at the Strand theatre.

HIROTA PUTS BAN ON WAR

TOKYO, Jan. 26.—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota expressed the firm conviction in the lower house today "there will be no war" during his tenure of office. He was replying to interpellations as to Japanese policy in China by Hitoshi Achida, proprietor of the Japan Times.

Hirota emphasized Japan's policy was peaceful but he claimed the necessity of armament in view of the heavy naval strength of other powers.

STAGE SET FOR MAYOR CONFAB

CALGARY, Jan. 26.—Final preparations were under way today for the opening of the conference of western mayors here Monday.

Major economic problems, including unemployment costs, readjustments of taxation and interest rates, will be discussed. The delegates will seek to draw up uniform policies in seeking the co-operation of provincial and federal governments.

Sues Leader Of Doukhobors

VANCOUVER, Jan. 26.—Peter Verigin was named defendant in a $50,000 supreme court suit today by Charles Nemetz, Vancouver, who claims the Doukhobor leader agreed to pay that amount for the use of a permit for himself and family to enter the republic of Costa Rica in 1931.

For Three Cents He'd Divorce Wife

BAKER, Ore., Jan. 26. — Down in Pine Valley lives a man who would give three cents to be freed from his wife. But it isn't as simple as that. He was so informed Friday by County Judge C. E. Baird to whom he wrote asking for a divorce by return mail. He enclosed a three-cent stamp to take care of the expense.

One Killed As Kilgard Folk Flee

ABBOTSFORD, B.C., Jan. 26.—The entire population of the village of Kilgard, 200 people, found refuge here today after one fatality while their brick and tile manufacturing community lies a victim of mud and water torrents from off Sumas mountain.

"It is a miracle if we do not find more dead," Constable Sidney Pattenden of the British Columbia Provincial Police, said. He stated that there were people living on Sumas mountain and their fate could not be learned as the mountain was still pouring down water which forbade approach.

The four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gee was killed in the slide which struck Kilgard, about 10:30 p.m., Thursday. Her father grabbed the child in his arms and rushed from their home when he heard the slide coming, but a torrent of rushing water tore her from his arms and she drowned.

All the inhabitants had to evacuate their homes as the slides swept through the village, taking some 10 buildings with it. They took refuge in a school building which was in a better position, and yesterday were brought to Abbotsford by provincial police and others. They had to be taken away from their marooned village by rowboats which approached from the Chilliwack highway.

There is eight feet of water on the highway between Abbotsford and Mission, and two feet between Abbotsford and Chilliwack.

LIBERALS PLAN ACTIVE TIME IN COMMONS

Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King to Broadcast in Two Weeks' Time

By THOS. WAYLING
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—The Liberal party is on its way. Friday the Parliamentary leaders of the party conferred with Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King on the strategy and tactics of the parliament as is, and the general election as is to come. Mr. Bennett's first assault has been repulsed and the counter attack has been driven home and the gains consolidated.

Next week the Liberals in parliament will repeat their offer of co-operation to the Prime Minister to help rush through any legislation that will be for the good of the public.

Two weeks hence, Mr. King will broadcast over a trans-Canada network the Liberal platform. He takes the view that the Liberal party has given the government of the day every opportunity to remedy conditions and they have failed. He will state specifically what a Liberal regime has to offer.

Liberal leaders have been aware of criticism that the Liberal party has been dormant, that it has no program to offer.

To this they reply that the re-

LLOYD GEORGE GETS WELCOME

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, today welcomed the return of David Lloyd George to the political arena. In a speech at Bexhill Sir John treated the declarations of the wartime premier in a more or less jocular vein but at the same time admitted their importance.

"Lloyd George's re-entry into the arena," Sir John said, "was an event which roused the greatest interest both among the spectators and the ranks of the other gladiators, to say nothing of the wild beasts which the gladiators were doing their best to overcome, and in which the help of so famous and experienced a performer was very welcome."

Noted Race Horse Injured: Destroyed

25,000 HELD AT MERCY OF RIVER FLOODS

Torrent Destruction in the South Will Run More Than $5,000,000

MARKS, Miss., Jan. 26. — As the mid-south counted its flood dead at 27 today, the Coldwater river pursued its path of destruction further southward to raise property damage estimates to $5,000,000 or more.

With thousands in refugee camps or marooned, relief workers estimated that 25,000 persons were suffering from the northwest Mississippi rampage and the lower reaches awaited in fearful anticipation.

Cheered by the arrival of 10 large, flat-bottomed boats, manned by U. S. engineers, the refugees at Marks expected the last of the marooned in this section soon would be brought into safety.

STORMS BRING NEEDY WORK

CALGARY, Jan. 26 — Winter storms and snowslides which have taken a toll of death and caused heavy property damage have brought much needed work to unemployed men, at regular hourly wages in Alberta and British Columbia.

Three thousand single unemployed men in government work camps along the Canadian Pacific railway right-of-way have been placed at the disposal of railways in their battle to restore communications.

It was not known here today how many men have actually been employed. It was known, however, that hundreds of men have been employment by both the C.P.R. and the C.N.R.

INK FROZE IN PENS SO THEY QUIT

CHARLESTON, W.Va., Jan. 26 —It was mighty cold but the seven enumerators for the federal housing administration decided they'd start on the rounds anyway. But they had to give up. An hour of tramping and they found the ink in their fountain pens frozen.

Baby Buggy Owner Tagged For "Parking"

SEATTLE, Jan. 26.—A bassinet, presented to Andrew J. Sedlacek and his wife for their new baby girl, was parked next to a fire hydrant in front of his office by a deliveryman.

Traffic Officer Fred J. McGill tagged it for "overparking, no license, no tail light, and parking by a fire plug." Now Sedlacek must appear in police court.

Louisiana Head Declares Martial Law In Effect

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—Governor O. K. Allen today issued a general martial law order for East Baton Rouge parish.

By QUINCY EWING

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—Senator Huey P. Long arrived here early today after an automobile dash from New Orleans, announced that "mob violence had stopped," and that he would immediately launch a court inquiry into a plot to "murder" him.

Reaching the state capital, where last night more than 100 men threatening his dictatorship, seized parish court house, Long established a base command of militia and other state forces, and ordered a 9 a.m. court investigation of what he said was a "murder plot involving four sheriffs and a district attorney."

The senator said the proceedings would be of a civil character, which he did not specifically define, before Judge J D. Gwomack, whom he recently had Governor O. K. Allen appoint to the East Baton Rouge District court bench.

As he made the announcement National Guardsmen assembled from varying state points patrolled the grounds of the towering state capital.

TO MAINTAIN ORDER

Long said Governor Allen had "called out the National Guard to maintain law and order."

The Senator accused the Standard Oil Company of responsibility for yesterday's armed assembly of citizenry hostile to the long domination and said his "compromise" with the company over the five-cent oil refining tax was "off" unless the company "stopped" the violence.

"Do you know what all this is about—no you don't; I'll tell you," Long told an interviewer.

TRAITORS IN RANKS

"Do you know why that bunch met down there? It was because we found out about, and arrested two men in a murder plot. They found they had traitors in their ranks.

"We picked up two men, one of them was going to drive the murder car.

"It was all fixed up. He was going to block my car on the highway between here and New Orleans.

HITLER DEATH RADIO APPEAL IS SILENCED

PRAHA, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 26. — Assassins have silenced forever Rolf Formis' nightly "Hitler must die if Germany is to live," but diplomatic complications arose in the wake of his slaying.

A woman and two men decoyed Formis, an anti-Hitlerite who broadcast attacks on Nazi-ism from his secret short wave station, NCAR, Pribram, Czechoslovakia, to his death Thursday night, and fled in an automobile toward the German border.

Friday, the German embassy, saying it twice had protested vainly to the Czech foreign office against the activities of the radio station, intimated the Praha government was partially responsible for the killing.

NINE BILLION DOLLAR BOND ISSUE VOTED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26. — Authority for the United States treasury to issue $9,000,000,000 of new bonds was voted Friday by the House of Representatives after it had beaten back persistent efforts to obtain currency expansion.

The bill, which will permit the treasury to issue bonds of small denominations to finance the $4,880,000,000 work relief program and other recovery measures, was sent to the senate at the end of a long tussle with inflationists.

CANADA BEATS ENGLAND, 6-0

DAVOS, Switzerland, Jan. 26—Winnipeg Monarchs continued their impressive parade of victories in the international hockey championships here with a 6-0 victory today over England. Tomorrow they play Switzerland to decide the world champion title.

Rangers Win

GLASGOW, Jan. 26.—Two of the favorites scored victories at home in the first round of the Scottish soccer cup competition played today. Rangers defeated Cowdenbeath, a Seond Division outfit, 3-1, while Celtic registered a 4-1 triumph over Montrose, also in the lower section.

PROBE OPENS OVER SINKING OF MOHAWK

Forty-six Lives Regarded as Lost Either by Drowning or Freezing

By THEODORE F. KOOP
Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Federal inspectors, steeped in the knowledge of the sea and ships, opened with unusual celerity today a deep-reaching investigation into the Mohawk disaster, in which 46 persons lost their lives.

As relatives completed identification of 34 known dead—12 persons still were missing—Washington officials hastened here to question survivors of the collision between the chartered Ward liner and the Norwegian freighter Talisman.

The officials were informed 117 of the Mohawk's passengers and crew were rescued before she sank.

Fifteen passengers and 31 members of the crew drowned or were frozen to death in the frigid waters of the Jersey coast.

Captain Joseph E. Wood, who some said went down with his ship, was among the missing. The body of Second Officer Malcolm Rigoulot was found in the sea.

Prominent among the passengers who died were Mr. and Mrs. Julian Peabody of Westbury, N.Y., and Prof. H. F. Cleland of Williams College, escorting a group of students on a geological expedition to Mexico.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

Peabody was a widely known architect, and his wife was a member of the polo playing Hitchcock family.

Joseph Weaver, chief of the federal bureau of navigation, took personal charge of the government inquiry.

Foremost in the subjects under inquiry was the condition of the Mohawk's life-saving equipment, the discipline of her men, and reports that her automatic steering apparatus had gone "haywire."

JAPS PREPARE NEW ATTACKS

PEIPING, China, Jan. 26.—Reports that the Japanese were moving new troops to the Chahar border and that further attacks were "imminent" were published by Chinese newspapers here today in dispatches from Kalgan.

Although these advices purported to come through Sung Chenyuan, Chahar provincial governor, previous dispatches had reported the Japanese military command at Kalgan as saying the disputed Jehol-Chahar border district had been cleared of Chinese and that quiet prevails in the area.

POLICE PROBE AXE MURDER

NORDEGG, Jan. 26.—His hacked body found lying in a lane near Batch street, Saturday morning, Stanley Pawlichi, laborer, was the victim of an unknown assailant.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police have started investigations into the mystery axe murder. The last time Pawlichi was seen alive was when he dropped in at a neighbor's home for a cup of tea at 11 p.m. Friday. He said he was going right home.

Little is known of Pawlichi, although he had lived here many years, but he is believed to have had a family living in Poland. His wife is thought to have recently moved to Belgium.

FRANCE FLATLY REJECTS INFLATION AS CURE

DEPUTIES BACK FLANDIN PLANS FOR FIRM FRANC

PARIS, Jan. 26—Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin Friday flatly rejected devaluation of the franc and inflation as cures for France's economic and financial ills.

He carried the chamber of deputies with him as he appealed for support of his economy policy, the legislators voting 450 to 122 in favor of his bill raising the limit on government bonds to 15,000,000,000 francs (approximately $990,000,000).

The measure, which launched Flandin's program of credit expansion, authorizes the discounting of short term bonds at the Bank of France in order to carry the treasury along during lean months.

NRA IMPOSSIBLE

Franklin D. Roosevelt's methods, the Premier said, are not workable in France. "They are impossible here," he said, "because results there are achieved through spending while our problem is to reduce (expenditures)."

Flandin scouted inflation talk by asserting that France could put into circulation 240,000,000,000 francs and still be within the range of her gold coverage. He admitted the legislation before the chamber might result in a slight increase in the currency in circulation. He argued, however, that it was useless to talk of credit inflation when business circles were suffering from a contraction of credit.

NEW DEAL OF "BALANCE"

The Premier referred to his forthcoming "new deal" legislation for establishing a better balance between production and consumption. This was to be achieved, he said, by substituting a legal situation for an illegal and arbitrary situation. The government, he said, would lighten production costs, aid the flow of trade, and in general initiate a policy for industrial recovery in the forthcoming legislation. Reduction of working hours was likewise envisaged as likely to contribute to improved conditions.

Prof. J. Huxley Cancels Visit

Prof. Julian Huxley, noted author and scientist, who was scheduled to appear in a lecture at Convocation Hall, University of Alberta on Monday night, under the auspices of the National Council of Education, has cancelled his visit, due to the heavy snows in the mountains and consequent holding up of traffic.

He is reported snow-bound "somewhere in B.C."

As other engagements have been made, it will be impossible for him to fill his date here and keep others. Therefore the appearance here has been concelled.

Cases of communicable diseases reported to the city health department this week numbered 52 as compared to 49 for last week, according to a report received by city commissioners from Dr. R. B. Jenkins, M.H.O., Saturday. Classification of the diseases follows, figures of this week and last week being given in that order: Scarlet fever, 5, 1; chickenpox, 37, 36; measles, 4, 6; mumps, 3, 2; whooping cough, 1, 2; tuberculosis (pulmonary), 0, 2; erysipelas, 1, 0; typhoid, 1, 0.

Members of the Alberta Teachers' Alliance interviewed Premier R. G. Reid on Saturday.

CHAMPION PIPE SMOKER TO BE CHOSEN TODAY

The man with a pipe comes into his own Saturday afternoon when the Hudson's Bay Company stage a smoking contest.

A heavy pall of tobacco smoke will rise from 100 pipes as the race gets under way at 3:00 p.m. on the fifth floor of the store. Each contestant will be given one-sixteenth of an ounce of tobacco and one match and the competition is to discover how long the bowl can be kept glowing.

make it stop and force me in the ditch, and then 14 or 16 were going to come along in another car and kill me."

"We found all the stuff in the fellow's car. There was sheriff's equipment, and everything."

Long would not say who the two men were or whether they had been formally charged.

"They are not being held exactly," he said.

"There were four sheriffs and one district attorney mixed up in it," he declared.

Vigilantes Quit As Purpose Effected

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26—An army of anti-Huey Long citizenry who seized the East Baton Rouge parish courthouse Friday afternoon from Long's dictatorship with shotguns, dispersed last night and declared their purpose "accomplished."

More than 200 armed men, revolters against the attempts of the Long state administration to take command of the parish government, stormed the courthouse late in the afternoon and barricaded themselves within the building for three hours until they were informed by their leaders that a truce had been arranged.

QUIET, FAST RAID

The movement was executed so quietly the armed forces were in full possession of the parish seat of government before news of the coup spread. The invaders met with no opposition.

Determined men shouldering sundry weapons guarded the entrances to the building and admitted only persons presenting proper identifications. The source of the movement remained clothed in mystery. The guards refused to identify themselves. Questions were met with smiles and grim responses that "you won't find out."

IT'S JUNE IN JANUARY FOR HARDY ROBIN

It's June in January for this robin, folks, though whether it's love that makes him feel that way or not, is uncertain.

Mrs. Mike Javaris, of 11418 97 street, saw a robin balancing himself on the telephone wires outside her home at 11 a.m., on Saturday, waiting for the good people of this section to throw out a few crumbs at noon.

The Bulletin's Bird Editor was asked to explain "how come," and the only reason he could give for the robin being here in the depth of winter—and such a winter—was the fact that the robin could not find any more lines to perch on in British Columbia, where heavy snows have wrecked all lines. Oh, oh!

Farmer Refutes Allegations Of Many Creditors

Refuting allegations made by creditors that he was not an efficient farmer a Wetaskiwin district farmer called a number of his neighbors to testify to his capabilities before the Board of Review appointed under the Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act.

His neighbors gave him a clean bill of health on his operations, considering him as good as the average farmer. None would admit he was any better than his neighbor, one witness putting it that each farmer considered "he had the best farm and was the best farmer in the district."

One witness, however, was of the opinion the farmers spent too much time in the pool room. The applicant for relief under the act was emphatic he did not spend more than one evening a month playing pool, but also stated that "When he went into a pool room he certainly made an evening of it." Representatives for the companies confronted him with average yields from adjacent farms, asking why his was so much below that average. The farmer had a ready answer for every question. The board, after spending over an hour hearing evidence, reserved decision on the case.

The United States, at the end of 1930, had developed water power of 14,885,000 horsepower out of an estimated potential capacity of 38,000,000, according to the U. S. Geological Survey.

HAUPTMANN AVERS POLICE BEAT HIM UP

Maintains Denial of Kidnap Plot Despite Grilling Cross-Exam

FLEMINGTON, N.J., Jan. 26—Bruno Hauptmann topped his stubborn denial that he ever saw the Lindbergh baby or turned a hand toward the ghastly ransom hoax with a guttural tale of police beatings and trickery Friday. More than a day in the telling, the impassive carpenter ended his direct story from the witness stand of his murder trial by charging police beat him when they arrested him and then made him write down words and misspell them as the ransom writer did.

Before he could leave the stand, however, Attorney General David T. Wilentz laid down a barrage of questions to get the reply that Hauptmann told the truth "To a certain extent" after he was trapped in New York last September.

INSISTENT DENIALS

But the carpenter insisted he "Told the truth already" on the stand Friday, and he doggedly denied knowledge of the ransom notes as Wilentz produced a little red notebook with similar words and letters in Hauptmann's hand.

With not a flicker of fear, Hauptmann looked at the little sleeping suit that Baby Lindbergh wore the night he was kidnapped and slain and said quietly:

NEVER SAW BABY

"I never saw the Lindbergh baby, alive or dead."

With the same immobility of expression, he declared the dead furier, Isador Fisch, his friend and partner, left with him the thousands of ransom goldbacks that were pried from the beams of his Bronx garage.

Then, as spectators stirred restlessly, he worked with Edward J. Reilly, his chief of counsel, through the columns of figures that told the story of his Wall street plunge, only to place the burden of the big money on the shadowy Fisch.

CONTINUED DENIALS

He denied he ever had been in Hopewell, or on the grounds of the lonely Sourland house from which the baby was stolen March 1, 1932. He denied he wrote the ransom letters; scornfully he put aside the kidnap ladder, saying it looked like "a music instrument."

He denied he collected the $50,000 ransom; that he ever even saw Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon, who says he gave the money to Hauptmann in St. Raymond's cemetery. He handled the kidnap chisel, found on the scene of the crime, and said he never owned it.

NEEDED MONEY—TOOK IT

Fisch, he said, left with him a shoe box which he put in a closet. One day last summer he opened it, found the ransom certificates, and, pressed for money, began spending it.

Fisch had been his friend, his business partner, he had died in Germany. Fisch owed him money. Here was money and he took it.

That was his story.

STOCK FLURRIES

Afterwards he went into his brokerage and bank accounts, describing his stock market manipulations. But even before that he had told of his savings, his business profits, his fight to be among the prosperous of the world. In the 10 months between Sept. 19, 1932, and July 24, 1933, he testified, Fisch gave him $14,090 to deposit in the brokerage accounts in Hauptmann's name and later, in his wife's name. This testimony was offered to stop the state's contention that Hauptmann's apparent sudden increase in wealth was due to his possession of the ransom money.

NOT RANSOM MONEY

Through the detailed account of his sizable stock tradings, in which, he said, he put "no Lindy ransom money at all," Hauptmann repeatedly injected the name of "Mr. Fisch."

"Mr. Fisch," he said, bought such a stock. "Mr. Fisch put in" so many thousands of dollars. With the frail Isador, Hauptmann explained, he traded both in furs and stocks, but Fisch "kept care of his line of business (the furs) and I kept care of stock."

"Always in cash" was the money Fisch gave him to play the market, he said, and on July 24, 1933, a $4,500 deposit "was the last money Mr. Fisch put in."

Ghoul Robbed Dead Woman: Goes To Prison

TORONTO, Jan. 26—Pleading guilty to theft of a diamond ring from the finger of Miss Marion Rogers, after she was killed in an automobile accident, Burton Sutton, public health ambulance driver, Friday was sentenced by Magistrate Robert Browne to three years in Kingston penitentiary.

Charged with bigamy in women's court, Sutton was given three years to run concurrently.

Tired Of Posing As Villain's Victim

Tempting offers have been flaunted in her face, but Dorothy Wilson, refuses to be diverted by them from her determination to establish a new reputation on the legitimate stage before returning to the movies. The reason is, she says, that all the movie executives know her for is her acting as the "wronged girl," and she's sick and tired of it.

TAXIS SHATTERED IN TORONTO STRIKE

TORONTO, Jan. 26. — Three men, described as union members and former employes of the Standard Cloak Company, were arrested late Friday on charges of doing malicious damage to property, following a riot in front of the Cloak Company plant in which 20 police and about 200 strike sympathizers were involved.

All the windows of three taxicabs, hired to transport "scab" workers away, were shattered and their drivers were forced to flee. An undetermined number of the workers leaving the plant suffered bruises and lacerations in the 20-minute battle that broke out as the employes were trying to leave the premises. A barrage of flying stones, ice and frozen rubbish met the workers as they left the Cloak Company plant.

The three arrested were: David Emer, 19; Charles Blumenstein, 26; and Max Rotman, 38. They will be arraigned in court today. Salary cuts led to the strike.

Wants Evolution In Curriculum

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 26—A bill to repeal Tennessee's famed "anti-evolution" statute was introduced in the house Friday by Cecil Anderson, a 22-year-old Vanderbilt university student and the youngest member of the state legislature. The statute prohibits the teaching of evolution in schools of the state.

sponsibility was in the hands of the present government, and nothing has been done that would hinder its efforts to bring about an economic recovery. The only opposition has been in parliament, where in line with its job as official opposition, the Liberal party has scrutinized legislation with a view to making it workable if it would be beneficial and seeking to amend it if it was proceeding along false lines.

The Marketing Act is cited as an instance, an act which had every single clause amended before it passed the Commons, and which had the opposition allowed it to pass would have been entirely unworkable, and subject to attack in the courts.

ACCEPTS CHALLENGE

Mr. King will answer Mr. Bennett's challenge for support to his program and justification on his record.

It is pointed out that every single thing Mr. Bennett proposes is in the platform enunciated by Mr. King in 1933 and told all over Canada in 1930, with the exception of Mr. Bennett's plans for the regimentation and dragooning of industry.

THREE ATTACKS

They will charge that Mr. Bennett has not gone to the root of things; that all his reforms and plans need money, and this will not be available until he has torn down the hangman's gallows tariffs and reopened the channels of trade. This the Liberals will pledge themselves to do.

Second: That Mr. Bennett has avoided the fundamental principles of financial reform: he has turned the ownership of the Bank of Canada over to a private corporation, and thus relinquished for the nation control of finance and credit.

Third: He has failed to utilize national credit to finance his projects, but has borrowed money instead, and increased the national debt.

ADVANCE REFORMS

Some of the younger Liberals are prepared to go further in the matter of financial reform, and declare for the direct substitution of the national credit for interest-bearing bonds and the refunding of federal, provincial and municipal debts in a huge low interest loan on the Australian plan.

It is charged that Mr. Bennett in his reform program has only talked generalities. The Liberal leaders are watchfully waiting for the arrival of the legislation to see in what manner he will deal with the specific problems.

Would Eliminate Crossing Mishaps

REGINA, Jan. 26—In committee of the whole Saskatchewan legislature moved Friday to eliminate level crossing accidents when it wrote into the bill to amend the Vehicles Act a clause requiring all motor vehicles to come to a dead stop not less than 200 feet from any marked by a sign indicating danger.

This bill, designed to cut down loss of life in railway accidents, was one of seven which were considered in committee during the afternoon.

J. E. Studholme Funeral Held

CAMROSE, Jan. 26—Funeral of John H. Studholme, 53, took place at St. Andrew's Anglican Church here Wednesday. Mr. Studholme, who died at the beginning of the week, from a heart seizure, was a coal mine operator near here. He owned and operated one of the few small mines in the vicinity.

He was born in England and was located at Ferintosh several years ago where he worked for the Canadian National Railways, and was afterwards in the employ of the Dinant Coal Mine. He was a member of the local Orange Lodge, and leaves a widow and three children.

Week Fire Loss

TORONTO, Jan. 26. — Fire losses in Canada during the week ended Jan. 23, 1935, were estimated Friday by the Monetary Times at $223,550, compared with $333,975 during the preceeding week.

ARMISTICE DAY TO BE OBSERVED IN ALL BUSINESS

OTTAWA, Jan. 26. — The House of Commons made it doubly sure Friday that Canadians should observe Remembrance Day as a public holiday. It gave third reading to a bill, sponsored by Minister of Justice Hugh Guthrie, which included the definition of Remembrance Day in the General Interpretation Act along with all other public holidays.

The bill would force business to suspend operations on the anniversary of the armistice.

TRY FASTER WAY TO RELIEVE A COLD

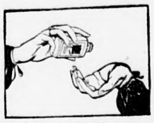
Follow Simple Directions:



1. Take 2 Aspirin tablets.

2. Drink full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

3. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 Aspirin tablets in a third of a glass of water and gargle. This eases the soreness in your throat almost instantly.

When you have a cold, remember the simple treatment pictured here . . . prescribed by doctors as the quick, safe way.

Results are amazing. Ache and distress go immediately. Because of Aspirin's quick-disintegrating property, Aspirin "takes hold"— almost instantly. Your cold is relieved "quick as you caught it!"

All you do is take Aspirin and drink plenty of water. Do this every 2 to 4 hours the first day—less often afterward . . . If throat is sore, the Aspirin gargle will ease it in as little as 2 minutes.

Ask your doctor about this. And be sure you get ASPIRIN when you buy. It is made in Canada and all druggists have it. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every Aspirin tablet. Aspirin is the trade mark of the Bayer Company, Limited.

EXPANSION OF BUSINESS ACTIVITY IS NOTED

The Bank of Nova Scotia Stresses Need for Balanced Budgets and Unshackling of Fetters to World Trade

President J. A. McLeod Warns that Ever-growing Debt Inevitably Brings Day of Reckoning.

General Manager H. F. Patterson Invites Greater Appreciation as to Operations of a Bank.

Mr. J. A. McLeod, President of The Bank of Nova Scotia, addressing the 103rd Annual Meeting of the shareholders at Halifax on the 23rd instant, spoke as follows:

"In reviewing the Bank's one hundred and third year of activity, I need not state that conditions last year were very much better than those of 1933. Trade (both external and internal) was much better; losses in business have been fewer; the margin of profit has been more encouraging to business enterprise.

"Best of all, with this expansion of business activity, the numbers of unemployed wage-earners in this country have been greatly lessened; for the working force of Canadian industry has grown, step by step, with the recent development of business.

"It is to be regretted that this improvement in general business has not yet been fully reflected in the commercial activities of the banks. As is not unusual in the first stages of business recovery, there has been a relative absence of demand for commercial loans. The banks—which naturally regard the financing of commercial enterprise as one of their prime functions—have, therefore, been led increasingly, during the last few years, to purchase securities of high grade but of low yield. Inevitably, during that period, there has been a sharp reduction in the rate of interest obtainable on their earning assets. In accordance with this situation, dividend disbursements have no less inevitably been reduced; as also the rate of interest paid on deposits.

"I need not add that, in the face of these developments, there has been no curtailment in the range of services rendered by the banks, to business and the public generally.

"There is, however, no need for me to stress the point. Under the circumstances, and having regard to the present low rates of interest (of which I shall have more to say presently), your Directors feel that there are good grounds for satisfaction in the Report, and believe that the Shareholders will concur with them in this view.

"Since the situation of this Bank is to be discussed fully by the General Manager this morning, I propose instead to discuss problems of a more general character."

Extent of the Recent Improvement in Canada.

"Let me return, for a moment, to the subject of re-employment. A very careful estimate, made in our own Office, places the number of workers actually employed in this Dominion (excluding agriculture and the public services) at about 1,735,000, on an average, in the twelve months of 1934. This compares well with an estimate of our employed working force, at an average of about 1,535,000 during the twelve months of 1933. We may take it, therefore, that about 200,000 of our people have been re-employed in the meanwhile: an increase, from one year to the next, of no less than 13%.

"For many workers, a return to the mill, the forge or the shop has not meant liberation from enforced economics. Nations do not recover in a day from an ordeal, such as that which we have been compelled to meet. Nevertheless, the return to self-support on the part of so many, the re-inforcement of personal self-respect that this involves, must be recognized as blessings for which, as a people, we should be profoundly thankful.

"Nor have the benefits of recent progress been confined to the wage-earners. The farmer, who does not (in the nature of his activities) suffer from unemployment, was affected seriously when, some years ago, the price of his produce declined and his net earnings disappeared. But 1934 saw welcome increases in the price of farm produce. On an average—though there was a sad exception in the drought-stricken areas of the West—farmers' cash incomes expanded quite considerably. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has estimated the combined values of our field crops, in 1934, at $536,500,000—an increase of almost $113,000,000 over the corresponding figure for 1933."

The Railway Problem Still Urgent.

"We should, however, be deceiving ourselves if we were rashly to conclude, because there has been so marked an improvement in the domestic condition of business—an improvement shared by farm and factory—that all is, therefore, well.

"We still face domestic problems as serious as those that confronted us two years ago, when the depression was at its worst. Despite heavy taxation, governmental and municipal, budgets are still unbalanced. More especially, we have as a nation, been obliged for years past to find about a million dollars per week, in order to meet the continuing deficit of our National Railways. To-day we must still find a million dollars per week—indeed, this is an understatement of the figure. These enormous sums of money can come only from one source—the pockets of the people of Canada. There is no man in this country capable of facing facts, who believes that we can carry this burden indefinitely.

"Most of the remedies that have recently been proposed look to further economies in railroad operation to relieve us of it. In this connection, I have no doubt that the great weight of public opinion favours the realization of every possible economy. But while dwelling on this point, it is only proper that I should sound a note of warning. So long as the volume of business, that is offered to the railways of Canada, remains as small as it is now, we cannot hope—merely by means of economical administration—to make an end of our railway deficits. The railways need economy; but no less urgent is their need for a greater traffic volume.

"Marked increase in the volume of traffic can only be the result of a marked expansion in the volume of the country's trade generally. This can scarcely be brought about by measures affecting our domestic market alone. We can scarcely hope for further marked expansion in this country's aggregate of business, unless and until the conditions are brought about, which will greatly stimulate the traffic through our ports.

"I shall have something to say, presently, regarding the strangulation of the world's trade, which we have witnessed during the past few years, and its consequences, direct and indirect. It suffices here to remark that there have been no more unfortunate victims than the Canadian railways, of the passion for economic nationalism, which has been dominating and still, in a measure, dominates the world."

Unusual Condition in the Money Market.

"One reason, I suspect, why we are not more greatly alarmed at the railway deficits, is to be found in the low rates of interest at which governments can now borrow. From the standpoint of a borrowing government, such rates of interest are, of course, most welcome; for they make possible economies in financing and re-financing that offset, to quite a considerable extent, the current growth in the dead-weight burden of debt—but an ever growing debt inevitably brings a day of reckoning.

"Two quite important features connected with this situation should, however, be realized. Firstly, the current situation in the money markets of the world is to some extent an artificial one. In a number of countries, simultaneously, governments have used every means in their power to make funds as cheap as possible. Secondly, their efforts to make money cheap have coincided with an absence of demand for new capital on the part of industry—a reflection in the money market of depressed industrial conditions and lack of confidence as to the future.

"The fact that, so far, it has been possible to cover the railway deficit and other deficits by borrowing (and so to meet our public obligations without undue difficulty), should not blind us to the dangers that are inherent in a continuance of this procedure."

The Lull in the Process of Recovery.

"Moreover, though there has been a very pronounced improvement in the general condition of business since February, 1933, we must not forget that the process of business recovery has, itself, been faltering in recent months.

"It is true that (when each of these years is considered as a whole), business was much better during 1934 than during 1933. But improvement did not continue throughout 1934.

"By the reckoning of our own Office I find that from the low point of February, 1933, till March, 1934—that is, in the space of thirteen months—Canadian business improved by nearly 30%. Few countries, if any, can claim a better record during this period.

"But—and this is a fact not lightly to be passed over—since March of last year, while the gains previously made have not been lost, there has been no further all-round improvement. Broadly speaking, we stand now just where we stood ten months ago.

"We cannot afford to stop at this point. We need still to support a considerable proportion of our population, which is destitute. We still produce wealth on a scale far less than our economic capacity. While, undoubtedly, times are better than they were, we cannot regard the conditions that confront us in the first weeks of 1935 as being, in any true sense of the word, satisfactory."

Continued Artificial Strangulation of Trade.

"We suffer still (in company with most other countries) from a handicap which, if it be not removed, is fatal to prosperity. The trade of the world (and that includes our own external trade, so vital to the welfare of this Dominion), is still bound fast in restrictive shackles.

"These are so complex and intricate, that the man in the street is still far from realizing their destructive influence upon his own welfare. But, whether conscious of them or not, he still suffers every day from their effects.

"I will not attempt to describe here the mesh of tariffs, quota regulations, manipulations of currencies, exchange controls and exchange clearing arrangements, by means of which all international trade, including our own, is being hampered to-day. No language at my command could exaggerate the destructive influence of these restrictions, or the need for removing them as soon as possible.

"All countries, including our own, have played a part in weaving this mesh of repressive measures. All are more or less responsible for the present obstacles to trade. All must co-operate in the removal of them if the commerce of nations is again to start moving freely.

"It is still true to say that we are only moving in world commerce two-thirds of the goods that were so moved five years ago. It logically follows from this that a large proportion of the workers employed in the world's export industries five years ago—workers who should now be making goods for exchange one with another—remain unemployed at present."

Our Close Concern with Europe.

"This condition presses hard upon all countries, but upon some it presses with peculiar severity.

"The countries that I have in mind are, more especially, the so-called 'Gold Bloc' countries and Germany.

"While the trade of almost all other countries has recovered somewhat during the past eighteen months, that of the 'Gold Bloc' countries and Germany continues ominously to shrink. The persistent decline in these countries' exports menaces the general recovery that has been made elsewhere; because in the absence of sales of their products in the markets of the world, they cease to be purchasers.

"We Canadians have been so fortunate, relatively to some of the peoples of other countries, that we find it hard to realize the strains which threaten several of the nations concerned in this continued shrinkage; and threaten, as well, the peace of Europe.

"For example, comparing January, 1934, with October, 1934 (the latest month for which price statistics in all of these countries have become available), we find that outside the 'Gold Bloc' area, market prices have been generally buoyant. In Britain, the level of wholesale prices experienced practically no change; in Canada, the wholesale price index rose by nearly 2%; and in the United States there was a corresponding rise of almost 7%. Even in Germany, beset by chronic shortage of foreign exchange, wholesale prices rose by nearly 5%. But in France (which is the main strength of the 'Gold Bloc') the wholesale price index fell, during this ten month period, by very nearly 12%.

"If we study the wholesale prices of France during the whole of the depression, we find a progressive and almost unbroken fall of wholesale prices which is simply staggering. The proportion of decline from March, 1929, till October, 1934, was no less than 45%; and, so far as we now know, the downward movement is continuing at present. What it has meant to the business of France, is better imagined than described.

"The rigid maintenance of the franc on the foreign exchanges, in accordance with its legal gold content, is of course one of the main reasons for the shrinkage of French export trade; for French export prices, in terms of other countries' currencies, are still relatively high. But France, like all countries, has greatly suffered also, from the general international practice of restricting commerce.

"There is no need for me to duplicate this illustration, by reference to the strains experienced in other countries of the 'Gold Bloc.' We know that all have fared in much the same way. Nor need I dwell upon the present economic difficulties of Germany.

"It is when men are desperate for lack of bread—or through the fear of losing a precarious hold upon employment—that they begin to listen, with attention, to the proponents of desperate remedies. In Europe today, there are so many men talking of desperate remedies, that the foundations of our common civilization, in the year just ended, were literally placed in jeopardy.

"Not once, but several times in 1934, the world found itself dangerously poised on the brink of an abyss. Situations arose, in which the chance action of some desperate individual might have destroyed the critical balance that still existed. Fortunately for all—for the millions in the Old World, and for the millions in the New World also—no such chance action gave the fatal impulse, precipitating chaos.

"But, though the world is in a better frame of mind today, than it was for several months from last June onwards, our international difficulties are not yet solved. We find, moreover, in the background of all the jealousies and rivalries, which mutual fear engenders, the sense of economic strain—severe in all countries, almost intolerable in some—which, in part the result of other causes, is also the direct and inevitable consequence of trade strangulation."

Economic Freedom our Prime Need.

"It is not the habit of the banker to preach, but the present moment is one when all men everywhere, without respect of calling or position, should use such influence as they possess to bring back the world to freedom, and to restore sane economic policies. More explicitly, we must work for the removal of the trade barriers, to whose pernicious influence on all trade, both external and domestic, I have drawn attention this morning. It is with this conviction that I draw your attention (not for the first time at a Shareholders' Meeting of The Bank of Nova Scotia) to the need for constructive action—the necessity for a world-wide lifting of trade barriers to release commerce from its present shackles—if the workers who sustain the fabric of our civilization are to find full employment again, if content is to be restored among us."

General Manager's Address

After reviewing at some length the changes in the items of the balance sheet and the profits for the year, Mr. H. F. Patterson, General Manager, turned to the more general problems confronting the Bank and spoke as follows:

"Since our last Annual Meeting, Parliament has revised The Bank Act. This most recent revision is of unusual importance, because it is accompanied by legislation establishing the Bank of Canada.

"The position of the Chartered Banks is altered by the new legislation in three respects, on which I think it well to comment. First, as you know, the privilege of bank-note circulation is curtailed, and is subject to progressive curtailment annually; till it is reduced, after ten years, to twenty-five per cent. of the Bank's paid-up capital. Secondly, the new Bank Act prescribes a maximum rate of interest or discount, that may be charged to the client by the Chartered Bank. Thirdly, from the date when the Bank of Canada throws open its doors for business, The Finance Act (whose facilities, in one form or another, have been at the disposal of the Chartered Banks during the whole of the past twenty years), will be discontinued; these facilities will hereafter be provided by the Bank of Canada.

"In respect of the first two provisions, it is obvious that the position of the Chartered Banks must, to some extent, be prejudiced by reason of them.

"Establishment of new branches on the frontiers of settlement in this country has been, from the first, facilitated by the broad privileges of bank-note issue, which have been a distinguishing feature of Canadian legislation. The Bank Act, indeed, has always in the past been an admirable instrument of pioneer banking. The Canadian bank-note has provided our people with an inexpensive currency. The profits of Canadian banks have, to some extent, been derived from their note circulation.

"Moreover (though the limitation in the rate of interest—not a new feature of The Bank Act, but now made rigid as never before—may look reasonable enough to the general public), it needs to be remembered that the cost of the small scale commercial banking operations, that are conducted on the frontiers of settlement, is very much greater than the cost of larger banking operations in the more fully settled districts of Canada.

"During the past few years, it has been necessary from time to time to close unprofitable branches in sparsely settled regions. As far as was possible, this has been done without prejudice to the settlers' interests. But it should be realized, in this connection, that the maintenance of banking service in remote areas is not made easier, but more difficult than before, by these changes.

"With regard to the newly-constituted Bank of Canada, we note with satisfaction that it has been placed under the management of two men of great experience and ability. The Governor of the Bank has already made for himself a distinguished reputation in Canada. The Deputy-Governor brings with him from England a lifetime of experience, in the difficult technique of central banking.

"As from now, the Bank of Canada becomes an integral part of this country's financial structure. Needless to say, The Bank of Nova Scotia will co-operate cordially with it."

Experience of the Bank's Branches Abroad.

"The problems connected with the revision of The Bank Act, and with the new central bank, relate of course primarily (though not wholly) to the Chartered Banks' administration in Canada. But no discussion of our own Bank's condition would be complete, which left out of account the large and important part played in its affairs, by the branches that it maintains outside the Dominion—branches which, for half-a-century, have played a part in the making of trade connections abroad for Canada.

"As between the several main areas in which branches are maintained abroad, there has been no uniformity of experience. In Newfoundland, business improved very definitely throughout the greater part of last year; though this improvement was not fully maintained during the fourth quarter. In Jamaica, weather conditions more favourable than any since 1931 resulted in better crops, and in improved business generally. In Cuba, despite the labour troubles and political disturbances of which everyone is aware, there has undoubtedly been a gradual improvement in general business. Nevertheless, the Cuban people are still far from having solved the great problems that confront them. There has been a fair improvement of general business in Santo Domingo; though the situation of the sugar growers is still unsatisfactory. Some retrogression of business, during the past year, has unfortunately been experienced in Puerto Rico. The prospects of business in this island are unfortunately still obscure.

"A discussion of the great experiment now being conducted in the United States (where this Bank maintains branches in three leading cities), would lead me so far afield, that I refrain from undertaking it this morning. For there is another question, of broad general interest to the Bank, that I should still like to discuss."

The Client and His Banker.

"No man can have been actively connected with the management of any bank, anywhere, during the past few years, without becoming aware that, during this time, there has been a certain lack of sympathy on the part of the public for the banker's problems.

"That is, perhaps, not remarkable—for men have been compelled by circumstances to concentrate their attention, as never before, on the practical problems facing them personally. Nevertheless, it is to be regretted, for (despite a good deal of criticism from outside, some of it well-informed, much of it quite ill-informed), the banker has continued to discharge the demands made upon him to the best of his ability; and, I believe, has served the community efficiently and well."

Services of the Bank Fully Maintained in Hard Times.

"I suspect that there is a general impression in many people's minds, which is largely responsible for the lack of complete sympathy between the public and the banker, which I have just noted—an impression that, in some mysterious manner, banks and bankers are immune from the lot of ordinary mortals and ordinary corporations, in periods of depression.

"It would indeed be well for the banker, could he be given such an immunity. Unfortunately, his institution finds itself exposed, at every turn, to the same influences as affect its clients.

"In only one respect does the banker's experience differ from theirs. While his profits are restricted, as their profits are restricted; while he has to consider daily how best he can adapt himself to the problems that beset his clients, as well as to those that beset himself, the volume of work that the banker finds himself called upon to do for his clients, does not appreciably diminish.

"For example, the volume of work performed last year by The Bank of Nova Scotia was only 3% or 4% less than that which it was called upon to do during 1928, a very prosperous and active year. But the revenues of the Bank were reduced in a far larger proportion than this."

World-Wide Nature of Service Precludes the Rapid Reduction of Expenses.

"The banker's duty to safeguard the deposits entrusted to him is absolute. Upon a great part of these deposits he is under the obligation to pay interest. Actually, during a depression, the proportion of interest-bearing to non-interest-bearing deposits tends to grow. Quite apart from interest paid on deposits, the banker finds that the principal items of expense, connected with the maintenance of an institution giving world-wide service, are not amenable to quick reduction.

"Such items as rent and upkeep of properties, taxes, and expenditures on postal, telephone, telegraph and other services, required in order to handle a relatively stable volume of business, are all uncontrollable. While industry may reduce its expenses (when markets disappear) by the simple expedient of discharging the workers on its pay-roll, it is not possible for a bank to reduce its salary expenses in this way. The principal reason for this is, that with an extensive system of branches, a certain minimum number of officers is required adequately to man those branches, so as to give proper service to the Bank's clients. As a practical illustration of this, I may say that our own staff now numbers 2,372; which is within one per cent. of its pre-depression strength.

"Moreover, while no doubt it would have been possible drastically to revise bank salaries downward, no such drastic action was taken by this Bank, at any stage during the depression. Certain reductions were made, but these were far less in proportion than the fall in the cost of living which occurred at the same time; and they left the members of the Bank's staff with a purchasing power as great as, or greater than, that which they possessed before the depression began.

"(These two facts—the relatively stable nature of employment in a bank, and the relative stability of salaries paid to the staff, might well be borne in mind by those who sometimes criticise in public the remuneration of bank officials).

"I have already referred to the uncontrollable nature of our expenses in the way of taxes. The taxes payable by the Bank in times of depression rise and continue to rise, as they do with the private citizen; as a matter of fact, the taxes paid in Canada, by The Bank of Nova Scotia, to the Dominion, Provincial and Municipal governments, rose from 1928 to 1933 by just about $280,000."

Relationship of Earnings and Expenses.

"Moreover, while expenses are thus by no means amenable to reduction, the rate of interest obtainable on the Bank's earning assets progressively declines, from the start of a depression.

"At first sight, it may seem that the recent reductions in the rate of interest paid to depositors have eased the situation greatly for the banker. I have no doubt that this has been taken for granted, in many cases, by the public. Unfortunately for the banker there has, in fact, been no such easement; because the rate of interest earned has fallen faster than the rate of interest paid.

"In this connection, a comparison between the position of our own Bank in 1928, when business was very brisk indeed, and its position in 1933 (when the lowest point of the depression was reached), is not unapt.

"Interest earned in 1928, on loans and investments combined, amounted on an average, in the case of The Bank of Nova Scotia, to 6% almost exactly—the precise figure was 6.01%. In 1933, the corresponding figure was only 5.17%. In other words, the average rate of interest earned, on loans and investments combined, was reduced during these five years, almost exactly by five-sixths of one per cent.

"Our expense account during these five years, for the reasons that I have already drawn to your attention, has not been reduced; as a matter of fact, notwithstanding all our efforts to keep our expenses under control, the total was slightly larger in 1933, than it had been five years previously. Consequently, in the five years of depression, the margin of gross profit (between interest earned and expenses of operation) was reduced substantially; and out of this reduced margin, we had yet to pay the depositors' interest, before beginning to think in terms of net profit.

"It was inevitable, therefore, that there should be reductions made by us, as well as by all other banks that operate under the same conditions, in the rate of interest paid on deposits.

"As everyone knows, a very large proportion of our deposits is interest-bearing. In 1928, the average rate of interest paid on all deposits was well over 2%—to be precise, 2.34%; and while this figure has been reduced somewhat during the depression, the reduction has been comparatively small. If we compare 1933 with 1928, we find that it was reduced almost exactly by one-quarter of one per cent. (The precise figure, representing average interest paid on all deposits, was 2.08% in 1933.) If the rate of interest paid to depositors in 1933 had been reduced, in the same amount as the rate of interest earned on loans and investments combined, it would have been only 1.50%—instead of the 2.08% which was actually paid, on an average.

"It is apparent, therefore, that the margin available, when expenses of operation and interest paid to depositors are offset against interest earned on loans and investments combined, became greatly reduced from the margin that had existed in 1928.

"I am sorry that, in the short time that has been available, we have not succeeded in bringing down the corresponding information for 1934; but I am satisfied that when this information is available, it will not disclose any material difference in the trend of change."

Grasp of this Relationship Vital to Comprehension of the Country's Problems.

"It is not usual for bankers thus to make public the details of their earnings and expenses. But at the present juncture, I do believe that this information, so necessary for the management of the Bank itself, should also be made available to the country. For to permit the spread of a notion that banks possess a mystical immunity, when everyone else has suffered so much and so long from the depression, is to strengthen the hands of the monetary "crank"—and there are many such today; to permit the spread of confusion in the public mind, regarding problems whose correct solution is vital to the public welfare.

"If it were well understood, by those who concern themselves in public affairs, that the banks as a group have continued to give the same full service to their clients as before, irrespective of the remuneration that they themselves receive; and that their earning power has fluctuated within wide limits, as a result of the same influences that cause the business man's earnings, and the farmer's earnings to fluctuate widely; there would be far less thoughtless criticism of the banking system now, far less distraction and confusion of public opinion.

"Our own relations with our fellow citizens would obviously be the healthier for such an understanding.

"In closing this analysis of the Bank's affairs, I wish to pay warm tribute to the widely scattered staff of the Bank; to whose unremitting efforts the Bank owes a great deal of its efficiency. We may congratulate ourselves that the branches of the Bank, at home and abroad, are strongly manned; and it is well that we should recognize our dependence upon the devotion and energy with which their business is conducted, by managers and staff alike."

SAYS STOCK FARMER REAL LOAD-BEARER

Mass Probe Hears Problems of Industry From Expert

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—The trouble with the livestock industry today is no one seems particularly concerned about falling prices but the primary producer, W. B. Somerset, Ontario marketing commissioner, Friday, told the Royal Commission on Mass Buying.

Somerset, having made a digest of all evidence dealing with the livestock industry, presented last year to the parliamentary committee, has formulated its problems and in a report to the commission has striven to present a solution.

FARMER BEARS LOAD

"The farmer is the one on whom all the consequences fall," said Somerset. "Other factors in the industry have protected themselves against loss through falling prices. In some cases they profit from lower prices, as instance the large earnings of the packing industry in our worst years of depression carrying with them suffering and ruin to the primary producer. The whole story seems to be one of poverty to the farmer through ill-distributed abundance."

VIEWS DIFFER

E. J. Young, Liberal member for Weyburn, challenged Somerset's statement that the packing industry made money during depression years. This led to a discussion among the commissioners and an interchange with the witness which had not ended when the commission adjourned to meet again Monday.

Somerset occupied the last half-hour of Friday's session succeeding F. M. Johnson, special investigator, who had enquired into merchandising methods of departmental stores.

"Heavy Water" Leaves Drinker Just Normal

OSLO, Norway, Jan. 26—Professor Klaus Hansen drank 10 grams of a 99 percent solution of "heavy" water Friday in an experiment to see whether it is harmful to humans and felt no ill effects.

The fluid previously had been believed poisonous to some animals and to fish. Hansen drank the solution before several medical colleagues of Oslo University.

Sleuths Follow Trail Of Gore: Trap Quarry

Drumheller Has Hold-Up Visitor

DRUMHELLER, Jan. 26.—A hold-up man, believed to have jumped off an incoming freight held up Clarence Cliffon, night man at the Universal garage early Friday morning and helped himself to $6 in small change from the cash register, later pulling out the telephone to prevent Clifton from communicating with the police. Clifton ran to a cafe immediately the thug made his getaway and notified police. No trace has yet been found. It is thought an accomplice remained outside the garage.

Lone Homesteader Commits Suicide

REGINA, Jan. 26.—John Darlington Williams, 32-year-old homesteader "baching it" in the Choisland district near Smeaton, Sask., was found dead in his shack, four miles west of Choisland, Thursday, according to R.C.M.P. here.

Williams was found with a rifle by his side. The opinion was expressed by police and Coroner W. R. Swaffield, M.D., Smeaton, that an inquest would be unnecessary, it being a case of suicide.

Letters found in the shack indicated that his father, M. C. Williams, lives at Great Village, Nova Scotia, a brother at Kamloops, B.C., and another at Revelstoke.

Mexico Crushes Rebel Outbreaks

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 26.—President Lazaro Cardenas told foreign correspondents Friday the peace of the nation is not threatened by the many scattered bands of rebels. He said measures already have been taken to restore order.

Referring to the religious disorders, the president said they are the result of the clash of interests of the church and the social revolution but he insisted the government is not persecuting Catholics or others because of their religious beliefs.

Josef Dobrovsky, Bohemian writer, was the "patriarch of Slavonic philology."

She Rules Masons In Regal Garb

The richest Masonic regalia ever designed for a woman Mason here is worn by Mrs. Seton Challen, grand master of the only Masonic fraternity organized entirely for women, as she was installed at the mother lodge, St. Ermin's, Westminster, England. It is a replica of that worn by the grand master of England, the Duke of Connaught.

Anti-Glare Device To Be Compulsory

REGINA, Jan. 26—Cmpulsory carrying of a device in automobiles to protect drivers against glaring headlights was written into the Vehicles act when the bill to amend that measure was before the legislature Thursday.

The device is attached to the windshield and may be put aside when not required. Most of them are made of celluloid.

Lamb meat of medium or inferior quality is characterized by being dry in the flesh, or, if from immature unfinished animals, is inclined to be soft.

HAVANA ONCE AGAIN RINGS BOMB BLASTS

Canadian Bank Among Damaged Buildings Says Report

HAVANA, Jan. 26. — While 13 other bombs exploded in various parts of Havana last night, a sack of powder was set off in front of the Santiago branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia. Damage to the Canadian-owned bank was not immediately determined.

One man was injured in the reverberating blasts in Havana proper.

Two Roman Catholic churches were bombed in Santiago.

Four other bombings took place later in Santiago, two damaging two public schools. Another exploded in a Catholic church.

Camrose Pioneer Buried On Friday

CAMROSE, Jan. 26.—The funeral of John McDermid, 82, well known pioneer, was held at the United Church here Friday. Mr. McDermid passed away suddenly Tuesday evening at the home of his sister, Mrs. Margaret Becker, in Camrose.

Mr. McDermid was born in 1853 on the Isle of Islay, Argyleshire, Scotland, and came to Canada with his parents when only six months old. The trip was made on a sailing vessel which took six weeks to make the crossing. His family settled in Minto, Grey County, near Mount Forest, Ontario. Of twelve children in the McDermid family, four are now living: Mrs. Flora McLean, Castor, Alta.; Archie McDermid, Golden, B.C.; Mrs. Janet McClellan, Mount Forest, Ont.; and Mrs. Becker of Camrose.

The deceased came west when 21 years old and lived in Alberta for more than 60 years. He was first located near Stony Plain and later homesteaded West of Olds, before coming to Camrose.

Fire Controlled In A.B.C. Mines

DRUMHELLER, Jan. 26.—Fire in the surface buildings of the A.B.C. mine, which broke out Thursday night, was reported to be completely out at noon Friday when the Drumheller fire engine and volunteer fighters left the property. The blaze was restricted to small dimensions but continued to smoulder for several hours. In addition to buildings the company lost a large electric motor. Losses are partially covered by insurance.

Glass Workers In Big Strike

CLEVELAND, Jan. 26—A strike of approximately 4,000 employees in the Pittsburgh Plate Glass company went into effect "peacefully and effectively" at midnight, Glen W. McCabe, president of the flat glass workers' union said.

A department of labor representative is endeavoring to bring about a prompt settlement of the differences between the union men and their employers, McCabe said.

Sino Militia Armed With Steel, Clubs

CHUNGKING, Szechwan Province, China, Jan. 26—A motley horde of Chinese peasants, the curiously-armed "Chinese militia," streamed into Chungking Friday to help Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalist armies defend war-torn Szechwan province against westwarding Communists.

Hundreds of farmers and farmers' sons, summoned to Chungking as the fear of the Communists grew, paraded here. Each bore his own weapon—ancient knife, huge sword, trident, spear or knotty club. New recruits carried staves for which blacksmiths were busy forging spearpoints.

There are 66 plants in Canada engaged in the production of glass and glass products. The value of the production was $7,831,000. Exports dropped to $63,000 from $145,000 in 1932.

Laundries To Start Research

OTTAWA, Jan. 26—Launderers and cleaners from all sections of Canada meeting here Friday decided upon the establishment of a Canadian research institute of launderers and cleaners.

The institute for the incorporation of which application will now be made to the secretary of state, is to be associated with the National Research council and have as its object the promotion of research, the development of standards and the maintenance of scientific and technical services for the laundry and cleaning industry.

PERTH, Ont., Jan. 26.—Lanark county's centenarian, Mrs. Mary Ferguson McIntyre, Dalhousie Lake, is dead at the age of 100 years, 11 months and five days. She died today at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Geddes, 23 miles west of Perth.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Japan will continue to confer with Great Britain on naval ratios through diplomatic channels, but will adhere to her demands for equality with the United States and Britain, near Admiral Isokuru Yamamoto, head of the Japanese delegation, told Havas Friday in announcing his trip home next Tuesday will be made without any stopover.

A Law Every Mother Should Know And Observe

Never Give Your Child An Unknown Remedy without Asking Your Doctor First

Doctors Say PHILLIPS' For Your Child

When it comes to the frequently used "milk of magnesia," doctors, for over 50 years, have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia — the safe remedy for your child."

Remember this — And Always Say "Phillips'" When You Buy. Your child deserves it; for your own peace of mind, see that you get it — Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Safety for You and Yours

You can assist others by refusing to accept a substitute for the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Do this in the interest of yourself and your children — and in the interest of the public in general.

PULLING A COUNTRY TO PIECES

An internationally-known observer of such things, after four months in the Orient, says "anything may happen there." China, he says, is a "vacuum," with Japan on one side and Russia on another both anxious to move in and occupy the space.

Current despatches confirm the accuracy of the description. One day Peiping reports that danger of Sino-Japanese friction in Chahar has been dispelled. The next day it is in "consternation" because Japanese airmen have bombed two Chahar villages, while Chinese troops are fighting communist armies on the western front.

The net result of it all is that the dismemberment of China is a continuing process. Contradictory despatches from Tokio and Moscow are only clouds of language thrown out to obscure the fact. Another thirty years like the last thirty, and the Chinese "empire" will consist of the valley of the Yangtse Kiang, where foreign influence may be strong enough to stop the course of dismemberment and preserve a fraction of their country to the Chinese.

ANOTHER "FLAG INCIDENT"

Some of the Prime Minister's followers seem to be more interested in national emblems than they are in national distress. A half-dozen of them wasted a whole day of parliament's time talking about the advisability or the danger of designing a distinctive flag for Canada, while Mr. Bennett's reform proposals lingered in the realm of the unknown and a million Canadians waited to know if, when and how they are to be taken off relief and given jobs and wages.

Or is it that the oratorical flag-makers thought the unemployed were about as likely to get work as the result of their deliverances on flags as from anything the Prime Minister has in mind? At least they might have respected their leader's expressed anxiety to get his plans and proposals before the House and into operation, and withheld the speeches they could have made quite as well and with the same result a month from now.

Nothing of course came of the debate. Nothing ever does come of that particular debate, which occurs every time parliament meets. At the end of the day parliament knew, as it knew before, that Mr. Dickie of Nanaimo wants a distinctive Canadian flag while some of his party colleagues from Ontario will have nothing to do with his treasonable idea.

Meantime, the million Canadians are still on relief and waiting to know when the Premier is going to give them a chance to get off.

HOW TO COLLECT TAXES

The council of the city of Red Deer is to try something new in tax-collecting schemes. Taxpayers of that city will be invited to pay their 1935 taxes in ten equal instalments, the first on Feb. 28th. and the last on Nov. 20th., "each payment to be discounted at the rate of ten per cent if paid by the 11th. of the ensuing month."

Will that bring in the tax-money? The guessing is all one way. Who could resist a ten per cent discount, coupled with the privilege of paying in ten per cent instalments? This is something more than a tax-collection plan. It is a plan for actual tax-collecting.

Edmonton's council should work out a scheme along the same lines. Tax-paying cannot be made too easy. It may be a compliment to the taxpayer to tell him he can save up enough money to meet a quarter of his bill at one "shot." But compliments are not cash, and it takes cash to pay taxes.

In these times most taxpayers have to pay as they go if they pay at all. There are too many daily demands to make the saving up of a considerable sum of money practically possible. Good intentions aimed in that direction go wrong before the three-month period has elapsed and due date finds the tax-money in hand something less than required.

Taxes should be payable in monthly instalments, or as near that ideal as possible, with a worthwhile inducement offered for meeting each instalment as it comes along.

CHEAP MONEY, AND HOW

Not least among the afflictions imposed upon the much-enduring public in these depression times are assurances from eminent professors of economics that we need not look for any real or permanent salvation.

The latest of these doleful deliverances comes from Montreal. Admitting cheap money is the only thing that can revive dead business, a learned professor there adds disconcertingly; "If the means by which cheap money comes shakes business confidence, the policy defeats itself. That is the reason why such inflationary policies as the United States are pursuing are not successful."

Translated into plan language this means that a manufacturer will not open his closed factory and set his idle employees at work unless he is sure those who buy his products will pay him in money that hasn't been inflated. And so on all along the line of business enterprise. There has to be cheap money, but it mustn't be money that is cheap because the supply has been increased.

To which the sufficient reply would seem to be that inflated money is the only kind of money the people of Canada ever had to do business with. The inflating was done by the banks, not by the Government, but it was inflation all the same. In ordinary times it was inflation ten times over. When a boom was being promoted the inflation went up to the nth degree.

Still, we did manage to do some business with the bank-inflated money, and only stopped doing the business when the banks started to cut down the supply they had created. The banks have not reduced the supply of real money—Government money—by one dollar. They couldn't do that. All they did was cut down the inflation they had added to the Government supply—and that was "plenty."

Somebody should take time out and tell us just why business would not come to life again if the Government undertook to create the amount of money needed to sustain property values and give permanent dollar value to real wealth; since business did flourish when banks were doing that very thing.

Or in the alternative, will somebody tell us how money is to be made cheap and kept cheap except by increasing the supply—which is inflation—and by continuing to increase the supply in proportion to the increase of real wealth?

J. T. Blowey left for Vancouver on Tuesday.

C. W. Mathers has added a photo engraving plant to his photographing establishment.

Newly-appointed Archbishop Langevin of St. Boniface will arrive in Edmonton on today's train.

Midwinter is past and the weather has been as fine as could be wished for. Only two short cold snaps since the snow fell, and good sleighing with the snow not too deep all the time.

Rev. Father Desmarais of the Roman Catholic mission at Lesser Slave Lake arrived last week by dog train.

Hugh Irwin was elected trustee of the Beaver Hills school.

"The Fool" is the name of a paper published in Prince Albert, of which a copy has been received. Judging by its appearance it is published by a fool who is not a printer.

The town has been full of train dogs for the last four or five days on account of the traders from Slave Lake and Peace River. The dogs are very thievish and destructive. One of them got into E. C. Emery's poultry yard and killed nine large Pekin ducks out of a flock of ten, and eight Plymouth Rock hens. Another one killed a small pig belonging to Dr. True.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Bishop Reeves is expected in from the north in a few days.

Paris: It is reported that the Czar has left St. Petersburg. General strikes are proceeding in that city and Moscow. Artillery officers of the battery which broke the windows of the winter palace have been arrested. The admiralty works at Sebastopol were burned.

Dairymen are petitioning the city council to impose a license fee of $20 on every person selling milk in Edmonton.

The city council have thirteen applications for the position of public works commissioner and twelve for that of finance commissioner.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The city council took definite action on the much-debated market question, when a report from the parks and markets committee was adopted to the effect that instructions be given for clearing the old Rice street site of materials and temporary buildings. It was further decided that farmers shall be allowed to tie teams there on payment of a fee of 10 cents, and that plans be prepared for a market building.

During last year 2,088 miles of railway were added to Canada's transportation system.

A Zeppelin which bombarded the Russian port of Libau was shot down and five of the crew taken prisoners.

TEN YEARS AGO

"There is less public ownership in Russia today than there is in England. Communism is gone, and the few big industries left under public ownership are so incompetently managed that they cannot last long"; this was the keynote of an address given by Mrs. Philip Snowden to a capacity audience in First Presbyterian church.

Dawson: Mayo reports a temperature of 70 below.

London: Jeremiah O'Leary and Cyril McGeough, two young men, appeared in court charged with conspiring to obtain naval secrets for the benefit of the "Irish republican army."

Poems That Live

GOOD-NIGHT

Good-Night dear friend! I say good-night to thee
Across the moonbeams, tremulous and white,
Bridging all space between us, it may be.
Lean low, sweet friend; it is the last good-night.

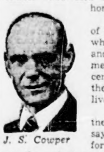
For lying low upon my couch, and still
The fever flush vanished from my face,
I heard them whisper softly, "'Tis His will;
Angels will give her happier resting-place!"

—Hester A. Benedict.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

This is being written on a cold night, with the themometer outside at 30 below. It's more pleasant to work than to walk the streets or go to a show. A book-dealer I spent a half-dollar with in the afternoon said I was a welcome customer. "Too cold for people to leave their homes," he said.



J. S. Cowper

But how about the homes of the 4,200 Edmonton people who are subsisting on the dole, and the thousands of single men herded into flimsy concentration camps. How are they faring, leading unnatural lives in the cold spell.

A friend complaining of the bitter cold in his home says it costs him $27 a month for fuel for the furnace. How are the unfortunate victims of this man-made depression managing to pay $27 a month for fuel out of their dole? It'll take something more than volumes of hot air from Ottawa to keep people warm and contented through this severe winter.

Even the coal miners in this coal province aren't having a happy time of it in the cold spell. At best theirs is a hard lot, delving in dark burrows of the earth, facing hardship and peril that warmth and force may be maintained in the community. Now they are complaining that married reliefers from the city are being sent to coal mines at less than the minimum rates of pay, making still harder the lot of those who must toil underground for a living.

I'd long nursed a hope to visit the coal branch, since I'd heard of the gallant old veterans of Cadomin about whom I penned some paragraphs some months ago. But the railway folder tells of a six and a half hour journey by rail from Edson to the coal town—six and a half hours to do 71 miles. If there's one piece of highway needed more than another in Alberta—outside of linking up the Jasper Highway with the Kamloops highway in B.C.—it's the stretch between the Jasper highway and the coal country. It would be a boon to sportsmen wanting to visit there, as well as for residents wanting a quick and easy way to the outside. The Cadomin folk must be a long-suffering people, or lack a spokesman to air their reasonable requirements, to remain so near and yet so far from road communication with the rest of the province.

As a consequence of starting his campaign of election promises ahead of the meeting of Parliament it looks as if Premier Bennett is going to be invited to a show-down on his good intentions. The Opposition leader has invited him to bring on his radical legislation. That's one test.

The vital test of Mr. Bennett's sincerity would be the revision of the Bank Act and the revision of the statute incorporating the Bank of Canada, to take it out of private control and make it a government-controlled bank. Both of these pivotal pieces of financial legislation were put through Parliament at the last session by force of brute majority. In both important matters the legislation was made effective for future years. Opinion was commonly held that Mr. Bennett was only staying on in public life to ensure that the banking and financial structure of Canada was settled favorably to himself and the other multi-millionaires of Canada for another ten years, and having secured that end, he would retire from Canadian public life to the British House of Lords. Now he seeks another term.

The monetary system of Canada is based on strange contradictions. The amount of money in circulation has no relation to the public wealth. The issuance of money—so vital to industry and welfare—isn't a government function. The government hands that valuable service over as a profit concession to private bankers. When it wants money for itself, it borrows from the bankers who get permission from the government to print money against government securities.

More oddly still, the issuance of money requires people to go into debt. Debt is the only kind of money we have today. When a man borrows from a bank his borrowings show as deposits. Money is issued not as a public utility but to enable private money-mongers to exact profits. That system Mr. Bennett by might and main at last session of Parliament fastened on the Canadian public for another term of years.

It's nonsense to talk of controlling capitalism and ending unemployment while the financial bloodstream of the nation is handed over to private profiteers. If money was freed from private profit and made a public utility unemployment would cure itself; an employed working population would see that predatory capitalism was properly controlled.

Was Mr. Bennett in his radio speeches talking with his tongue in his cheek? We'll soon learn. If he was sincere in his protestations he will overhaul the Central Bank Act at the present session. If he doesn't take steps to free the monetary system of the nation from the limitations of private control for profit, then we'll know that his professions are only another act in a farce, of which the first act was the banking legislation of 1934.

Mayor "Gerry" McGeer isn't letting the grass grow under the feet of his reforms. When Premier Pattullo refused him power to cut the Vancouver city interest rate, "Gerry" called a meeting of the bondholders. You'll see the notices next week calling a meeting for Feb. 11. Representatives of $66,000,000 of debt will be there to consider "Gerry's" proposal to suspend half the interest rate. Premier Bennett is to receive a copy of the notice.

If you want to know how the burden of debt cripples progress, consider this from the Sewerage Board of the coast city. Last year it expended $316,000 in interest payments and only $61,000 on construction and maintenance. The overhead administration cost $3,700. The fees to fiscal agents in London and for stamp taxes came to over $5,000.

Things are coming to a show-down in western Canada as at Ottawa. The sooner they come the better.

Sprains

By DOCTOR FRANK McCOY

The purpose of the joints is to allow greater motion than would be possible without them. Different types of joints are found in the body; for example, the ball and socket joint of the shoulder allows very free movement of the arm. If you twist your arm and shoulder around, you will find that it moves in several different directions. The elbow is a little different, being a hinge joint, and in your jaw you not only have a hinge joint which allows you to open and shut your mouth, but you have a gliding joint which enables you to push your teeth from side to side to place the lower teeth in front of the upper teeth.

Dr. F. McCoy

Movable joints are reinforced and joined together by strong ligaments. A sprain means that some of these ligaments have been torn or stretched by a movement which is not in the normal range of the joint. The lubricating membranes between the joints are also usually damaged, and sometimes the blood vessels of that region may become ruptured and fill the joint cavity with fluid.

A sprain makes itself known by a sharp and severe pain, rapid swelling of the part, local heat, and sometimes a shiny appearance of the skin. These symptoms occur in the immediate area of the joint. The patient avoids movement or weight upon the part.

Immediately following a sprain care should be taken to avoid movement. If the foot or knee is hurt the limb should be raised to relieve the congestion of blood. No walking should be done with a sprained ankle. The part should be bandaged tightly and cold applications used. Some prefer adhesive tape and others a tight bandage. The use of cold packs or running water tends to prevent an excessive congestion of blood.

While rest is important in the beginning, at least for a few days, it should not be continued for too long a time, or the prolonged inaction may allow the joint to heal up locked in one position. If you wish to keep the power of movement in the joints you should begin to move them as soon as the acute period of inflammation and swelling has subsided. Stiff joints may result from resting too long a time.

During the inflammation, lymph will be exuded and the joint may become bound around with material of a fibrous nature leading to adhesions. Skilled manipulation will in most cases cause the joint to return to a condition of free movement.

Where one has once sprained an ankle or dislocated a joint there is a weakness remaining for some time and the part may be very easily injured again. If there is any distortion of the part the doctor should be called immediately, as the sprain might be accompanied by a dislocation or even a fracture. Sometimes the vertebrae in the back are injured by sprains or slight displacements. These can usually be corrected by treatments from an osteopath or chiropractor who should be able to restore the part to its normal position. In people who have a rheumatic tendency sprains are sometimes the beginning of chronic synovitis or arthritis as the rheumatic toxins tend to settle in the injured area.

Whenever any sprain occurs it is the best plan to have a doctor examine the injured part and he will be able to determine whether the injury is one requiring special care to help return the joint to normal. He will also advise you as to whether an X-ray picture is needed. Proper care given to sprains prevents loss of movement for any longer than necessary.

If you would like to receive an article called "Strains, Sprains and Injured Muscles," I will be pleased to send it. Enclose a large self-addressed, stamped envelope with your letter.

Horoscope

By MARY BLAKE

It is advisable not to allow a feeling of personal antagonism to influence any of your actions on this January 27. Avoid becoming excited should you hear a rather startling rumor concerning someone you know, for the report may be greatly exaggerated. Before the day is over you will probably have a wish realized.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those infatuated by someone's charms, should avoid being exasperating.

If a woman and January 27 is your birthday, you are blessed with a sense of appreciation of true melody, and things with a melodious flow can probably transport you into the seventh heaven of delight. An early marriage might be helpful to either a social, business, or professional career, and should be conducive to happiness.

If a man and January 27 is your natal day, while you are capable of appreciating things of artistic worth, you are very practical and may be inclined to pay but little attention to them. It might pay you to give more attention to the arts.

For satisfactory results in either business or social activities, it will be necessary to put a lot of energy, as well as enthusiasm back of whatever you undertake on this January 28. Be careful not to offend a caller, for the average person you meet may be inclined to take offense on the slightest pretext.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those keeping company with serious intentions, will be wise to remember some New Year resolution they were asked to make, and keep it.

If a woman and January 28 is your birthday, you may be inclined to borrow trouble. Matrimony should terminate successfully and might fit in admirably with a business career.

The child born on January 28, usually when it reaches preparatory school age, is inclined to be a little self-conscious.

If a man and January 28 is your natal day, the most important thing possibly for you to do is to cultivate an optimistic spirit and confidence in your own ability, of which you have a superabundance.

SIDE GLANCES—By Geo. Clark

"For years he couldn't relax with company around."

On This Date

A Day in Canadian History — o — By FRED WILLIAMS

On this date in, 1797, took place the first fire at York, then just beginning its life as the Capital of Upper Canada. The record states that "the dwelling house of His Honor the Administrator (Peter Russell), lately built at York, and in considerable forwardness, took fire by some accident and was entirely destroyed."

This incident caused the few inhabitants of the budding metropolis to draw up plans for fire protection, but until 1800 it was a case of every man for himself. In that year, however, an act was passed by the legislature to compel every householder to "keep two buckets for carrying water when any house shall happen to be on fire, which buckets shall be made either of wood, leather or canvas, painted on the outside and covered with pitch on the inside and shall hold at least two gallons of water. And the said buckets shall be marked with the Christian and surname of the housekeeper to whose house they belong and shall not be used for any other purpose than the extinguishing of fires."

It was also ordered that each house must have two ladders, one to reach from the ground to the eves of the house, the other to be secured with bolts on the roof near the chimney.

In 1802 Peter Russell presented a fire engine to the town and the townsfolk in their gratitude built a fire house, but in 1813 the American invaders carried the fire engine away with their other loot. In 1815 there was a fire in the Anglican rectory as a result of which this "card" was published in the Upper Canada Gazette:

"Dr. Strachan begs leave to return his thanks to the inhabitants of York and also to the military and several respectable strangers for their prompt assistance last Sunday in first endeavoring to extinguish the fire which broke forth at his house and in afterwards saving his property."

It was not until York became Toronto in 1834 that a real start was made upon fire protection and then the fire companies were volunteers. It was not until 1874 that the permanent fire brigade was organized.

England's Privately - Owned Central Bank

We now approach what is much the most important landmark in all these years and, after the Reformation and the destruction of the monarchy, the most important event in modern English history.

At the end of the year 1692 a group of rich men, who made the politician Montague their agent, proposed to follow the method of state, finance which the Dutch had founded long before, and to mortgage to their advantage the powers of government.

Montague's first proposal was put forward on December 15, 1692. On January 20, 1693, came the first regular inception of the plan, which was matured in the course of the next few months.

Money was needed for William's policy of Continental war, and this group of rich men proposed to lend the government £1,200,000 upon terms which, including commissions and perquisites, came to between 8 and 9 per cent.

This was the beginning of what later came to be called the National Debt, for its special character was not merely the lending of the money to the government, a transaction as old as history, but the novel proposal that the interest should be strictly guaranteed on the security of the national taxes, while immediately afterwards a privileged institution was called into existence, a central bank, which should have the handling of the loan and the interest, and the right to issue notes of credit on the security of the government.

This last point was the essential. Anyone can issue a note of credit (which is merely a promise to pay) and can use it in lieu of money if he can persuade other people to accept it. But the special character of this new institution, the Bank of England (the charter of which dates from July 27, 1694) lay in this: that when it made out a paper promise to pay, all the resources of England were to be put at its disposal to enable it to keep that promise—in other words, its credit was not private but public.

It could not fail so long as the government could tax Englishmen in order to pay its debts.

This was in effect to give the Bank of England the right of creating money.

It could not coin the metals gold and silver; the government reserved its right to do that, but it could print on a bit of paper, "I, the Bank of England, promise to pay the bearer five pounds," and the bearer knew that there would be no default so long as a government responsible for the bank charter existed and could force people to pay taxes.

All the fiscal resources of the nation were a guarantee for the payment.

If you or I promise on a bit of paper to pay five pounds to anyone on delivery, and find we cannot meet the obligation, we have to default, after which any future promise of ours of the same kind would be heavily discounted.

We cannot turn to a neighbor and levy a tax upon him and say, "You must make good this promise of mine; if you do not I shall destrain upon your goods." But that is exactly what the new credit system meant for the Bank of England.

The Bank of England note for five pounds—that is, a promise by the Bank of England to pay five pounds—was certain to be met, because if by some accident the bank could not meet it the taxpayers of the country could be called upon to pay it, and the ultimate certitude the holder of the paper had of getting paid was the public force at the disposal of the government, which can collect taxes from the community.

The Bank of England paper being thus guaranteed, there need be no hurry to cash it; it could pass from hand to hand in the same way as current metallic coin. But the Bank of England was not a department of government, as it should have been.

It was an independent corporation privilegd and guaranteed by government but pursuing a policy of its own; and from that day onward in greater and greater degree the Bank of England has had the last say in any government policy involving expense, and particularly in the matter of foreign wars and coercion of dominions.

The first advance had been, as we have seen, just over a million. In four years the National Debt was twenty millions, and in 20 years it was already over fifty millions.

It became a permanent institution. In this fashion governments were enabled, for their immediate purposes, to saddle posterity with the duty of financing their wars, while, what was worse, wealthy men found an opportunity for levying a permanent tax upon the community.

If you had £10,000 to invest all you had to do was to buy government stock, and you were certain of getting your interest for ever out of the taxpayer. Today every family in England is paying on the average £25 a year to the holders of government stock—that is, to those to whom the government have had recourse as moneylenders.

It was on a dark night. A trainman on top of a car was giving signals to the engineman when he dropped and broke his lantern. Another man on the ground tossed his lighted lantern up to the man on top of the car.

In a few minutes the fireman, who was a new employee, came back and called to the man on top: "Let's see you do that again."

"Do what?" asked the brakeman.

"Jump from the ground to the top of a box car," answered the fireman.

HOSPITAL HAS HIGH RECORD FOR PATIENTS

Annual Statistics of Royal Alexandra Are Filed

There were more than 400 patients in the Royal Alexandra and Isolation hospitals on Friday, the largest number in the hospitals' history, Superintendent Dr. A. F. Anderson told the Edmonton hospital board on Friday night, in giving his annual review of hospital affairs. V. A. Porter was in the chair.

There had been a total of 99,375 patient days during the year, made up by the 7,809 people who had been inmates during the year, Dr. Anderson said. Of this total, 257 persons had died, 56 infants being among this list. A total of 968 babies had been born at the Royal "Alex" during the year.

The average stay in hospital of each patient had been 12.7 days, the report showed, and the daily average of patients had been 273 sick persons.

PATIENT COST $3.21

The actual cost of operation of the two hospitals during the past year had been $361,773 as against an estimated expenditure of $350,000. Total earnings of the hospital during the year had been $290,261, an increase of some $10,000 in earnings over the previous year.

The city grant required for 1934, actually, is $98,423, some $1,500 under the estimated need of $100,000.

The cost per patient day had been $3.21.

PRAISE FOR STAFF

A. Farmilo, retiring chairman, praised the doctor and the entire staff for the whole-hearted way in which they had worked during the past year, and thanked all for their support and co-operation.

The December export of meats in Canada amounted in value to $1,977,000.

Prof. Hardy Author Of Enthralling Book

Character of Unreal Past Brought Out in "Father Abraham"

Adding lustre to his Alberta University accomplishments Dr. W. G. Hardy, Professor of Classics, has become author of a new and enthralling book. It was printed by the MacMillan Company under the title of "Father Abraham."

From a faint unimaginable character in a dim and unreal past to a vigorous figure in whom life was a glorious and pulsating experience. Like a true magician, Dr. Hardy in this novel brings to his readers' imagination a figure so enthrallingly real, so human that this remote Biblical personage seems re-created to a life as actual as if it had been lived in the present day.

With one bold stroke, Dr. Hardy has given his readers in Father Abraham a thoroughly humanised characterization and in no part of the book, from the first vivid picture of the patriarch as a small boy gradually awakening to the realities of life until he reaches the end of his long span as a famous and powerful leader of his tribe, is this human element lost.

Vividly, the portrait of the city of Ur is painted, the busy trade centre of the east, seething with life and intrigue.

Abraham is a small boy eight years of age at the commencement of the story. Living with his father and mother he attends school, learning the complexities of human existance from the cruelties of his fellow scholars and from the sensual infidelities of his father.

He reaches adolescence, a sensitive and inquiring boy, questioning the authenticity of the gods worshipped by those around him. Fascinated by women, he fears them because of their, to him, dangerous enticements.

Soon after his first vision of the God that he firmly believes to exist in supremacy to all other gods, Abraham leaves his home for the desert where he meets Sarai, the beautiful princess of the Habiru tribe, who later becomes his bride.

The changing personality of Abraham and his development from a youth to an experienced man against a vivid succession of backgrounds which include Egypt and the magnificence that is the court of the Pharaoh, the land of Og, Jerico and Gerar, is laid before the reader, while throughout the entire story the reader is given a comprehensive insight into the complexities of the patriarch's life caused by the constant struggle between sensuality, and a strain of mysticism which recalls him repeatedly to acknowledge the supreme being in whose existance he believes.

The consuming and overwhelming passion which Abraham develops for the lovely Hagar, the Egyptian dancing girl and his attempts to overcome this passion are described by the writer with a candour and beauty of description that places him in the ranks of the artist.

The wanderings of the tribe, their wars and disputes, the night in Jericho when the people of Lot run riot, and over all the continued search for God, whom Abraham believes, has denied him the right to a son gives the author full play for his descriptive powers.

At last he receives the son he has wanted for so long, and, as in the bible story is prevented from making the sacrifice of his son to his God. The boy grows up, serious and religious and a wife is found from among the patriarch's brother's children.

The story closes with Abraham's final conviction that all races must have their own gods and be conscious that their particular god is more powerful and different from all other gods.

Father Abraham is a vivid and moving book and one, in its unquestionably frank and candid outlook, that will remain in the reader's imagination.

Dr. Hardy has established himself as a writer of outstanding ability, insight and descriptive powers which place him in the foremost ranks of Canadian novelists.—M.S.

Being Opinions of Bulletin Readers

DOESN'T BELIEVE IT

Editor Bulletin: While there is a great deal of discussion going on about the recent economic speculations of Mr. Bennett, one would be sadly lacking in political judgment to consider these speeches seriously. They are nothing but a rehashing of the Premier's flowery vocabulary, his usual steamy splurges. Anyone who believes that Mr. Bennett has really suddenly been transformed into a resolute reformer is still spellbound by the promises of 1929. We do not need another five years of Mr. Bennett's futile "blasting" to positively prove his utter inconsistency and incompetence to give the Dominion a lead out of the present economic morass. Therefore, it is a waste of time to give grave consideration to the reforms he proposes to establish if given the support of the people at the coming election. These past five years have shown time and again that Mr. Bennett is firmly addicted to talking through his hat.

In 1929, Mr. Bennett "blasted" his way into the Premiership of Canada by vowing that he would sweep away all the economic ills of the country. His solutions turned out to be meagre relief allowances to the unemployed, internment camps for single jobless men away out in the wilderness under police and military supervision and jail for working men who strongly objected to the degeneracy of his policies. The much touted "public works program" has been the building of police barracks and military arsenals. He has upheld the "sanctity" of the bondholders' dollar while he has ignored the declining purchasing power of the wage-earner through wage-cuts. Then he turned to God to lower the wheat crop as the solution to the problem of the farmer.

Five long years of the Tory regime, in which they have had ample time to implement any reforms they honestly intended, these years of retrogression are plain proof that as a political force they are bankrupt of leadership and vision and as a result are due for elimination. The exasperation of the people has been expressed in the recent provincial elections and means that the present political group in office is doomed to complete relegation. They fully realize this and their spokesman, Mr. Bennett, is out with a last wild attempt to stampede the people as he did at the last election.

As for Mr. Bennett's proclivity for "blasting" hot air, all through his tenure of office he has indulged in such exaggerations of speech that it would be asinine to have any faith in his great intentions. Only a short time ago, in a speech over the air, he rose to unheard of heights of passionate oratory in declaring that prosperity had returned to Canada only the people had not awakened to a realization of the fact. With a spate of statistics, he proved that "Canada is on the march." This right-about-face he is now indulging in is truly comical, a downright farce. This pre-election demagogy has only one meaning. Mr. Bennett's panacea can only mean the enforcement of a lower standard of living and liberty by police and military coercion. That is what he is building all these police forts and military arsenals for.

The people are now thoroughly disillusioned with empty speeches and stupendous promises that are never meant to be fulfilled. They have tolerated the inaction of political parties with a patience that is exhausted and are chafing to get rid of Mr. Bennett and all that he stands for. There is now no place for Toryism in the economics of our times. Nobody wants another five years of retrogression. Mr. Bennett and the element in society he expresses, they know that their part in the economic history of Canada is about to be ended. Yet, Mr. Bennett aims to go down in a bigger and better "blast" of the same old powder.

RADIO MUSIC

Editor Bulletin: I wish that I was close enough to pat Mr. J. Madeling of 11006 130 St. on the back for his article in the Mail Bag of Tuesday's Bulletin on radio music. I have for a long time been hoping that some one would start this discussion. While Mr. Madeling has covered the truth, I think pretty well, so I will leave it at that unless the opposition say something, but if they do I would like to be in that fight. I am yours for old time music.

SOCIAL CREDIT

Editor Bulletin: Your report under the caption "Social Credit will be Issue" dated January 16, contains such a misconception of the system that I am sure everyone knows better. However, for the few who may not, allow me to contradict the statement that Social Credit aims to end profit. On the contrary, it aims to establish it. The second basic principle of the system is the introduction of the "just price." This involves all it says; namely, that commodities will sell for the cost of production plus a just profit. One can see that with this principle in force, the present ridiculous price spread will be obsolete, and farmers can again operate on a profitable basis.

Give Social Credit a chance. It is bigger than party politics. It is practical Christianty.

TWO GOSPELS

Editor Bulletin: The fact that millions of people have signed the Townsend plan proves the existence of widespread discontent and the need for the spread of economic truth. Walter Crippmann's comments prove that he, and those for whom he speaks, are even less well informed.

They believe that money must be scarce to be sound, therefore it must be saved, therefore we cannot afford to consume what we produce, but must tighten our belts and work harder, so as to save money to invest to make more money. The object of money is money. That is the gospel of money.

But production cannot continue without consumption. An engine cannot function without an exhaust, a man cannot inhale unless he exhales. What are the facts?

Taking Crippmann's own figures, the average retail purchase per capita is 75 cents per day. No wonder millions are idle and warehouses are bulging.

And the cure? Borrow money to pay people to destroy crops and livestock by the millions, and cut down production, and borrow billions to put millions of men to work at subsistence wages.

That is the gospel of money and of slaves.

Townsend and his followers at least realize that goods are made to be used, and that money is merely to facilitate the process, but they fail to realize that the total amount of purchasing power is never enough to buy what is produced and under the present financial set up, never can be.

So that to tax it cannot be a real remedy.

Let the state create purchasing power on the basis of the national credit, the national ability to produce goods and services as, when and where required, sufficient to equate production and consumption. Let this money, or purchasing power be distributed by means of:

1.—A national dividend paid to everyone as a shareholder in the national business as a going concern, sufficient, at least, for the necessities of life.

2.—A general reduction in retail prices, so that goods can be sold at their real, and not their financial, cost of production, and the retailer be compensated for so selling below cost.

This money can be created without cost, issued without interest, and automatically would return to its source for cancellation as the goods, against which it was issued, are consumed, without taxation.

We should consume to the limits of our desires, or our powers of production. In any real sense we cannot afford to consume less.

It is the gospel of Social Credit.

JAPAN—WHITHER BOUND

Editor Bulletin: One wonders where is the ultimate destination of Japan's campaign of subjection of the far East to her Imperial will.

Consider the following points:

Japan's subjection of Formosa.

Japan's subjection of Korea.

Japan's subjection of Manchuria and her literal theft of China's half of the Chinese Eastern railway.

Japan's unwarranted attack on Shanghai (which opinion was confirmed by the League of Nations), after the mayor and Nanking government had accepted the Japanese demands, Japanese state officials advised China that Japanese forces would not attack Shanghai. Within a few hours Japanese naval forces landed, disarmed settlement police and invaded Shanghai. Such is the worth of Japan's word when state and war departments disagree.

Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations because it would not bow to Japan's will.

Japan's refusal to give up control of former German controlled islands, mandated to Japanese control by the League of Nations.

And now, Japan's present campaign against Chinese patriots uprising in Jehol province with the plain intention of annexing Chahar province.

What is needed is joint action between Great Britain and the United States or the League of Nations to institute either united drastic military or economic pressure against Japan to put her in her place.

Canada, particularly, the Yukon, due to her unprotected shores and close proximity, may soon be a target for Japanese aggression.

HEATING CIVIC BUILDINGS

Editor Bulletin: A few days ago an article appeared in your columns, "re an offer by local coal dealers to supply all city buildings now served with gas with all the coal they required for heating purposes at $1500 less than was paid for gas in 1933." Now it is not our desire to enter the Coal vs. Gas War, but we would like a little space to analyze this scheme and state our side of the case.

It appears according to the press account of the offer submitted by Mr. J. B. Starky that he pointed out at least 10 miners now on city relief could be employed in providing the city with the coal required and that the average relief paid each miner's family is said to be $60 per month; which might mean that another $7200 would be cut from relief costs." He goes on further to point out: "The necessary work of firing, removal of ashes, etc., could be done by men now on relief who could work out their relief in this manner."

We notice that Mr. Starky failed to take in to account the fact that the above mentioned relief allowances only cover the bare necessities of life under four headings, viz., food, fuel, clothing, and shelter, on a direct relief basis, said basis being adopted by the major governments because it was deemed cheaper to keep the unemployed on a mere sustenance and have them do nothing rather than provide work to give them living standard and it is in this manner that the present relief scales have been arrived at, to the cost of which all governments contribute their proportion.

The presumptions on the part of the city that the recipients were supposed to work out their relief was only injected into the scheme at first in order to keep up the morale of the recipient. Permission was given the municipal governments to work these men one day per week on new created work only. Now we find as time goes on the city displacing more and more of their regular maintenance men thus leaving these displaced men no alternative but to apply for relief, they are then sent to do the same work in return for a limited allowance under the above four headings, and find a good many of our citizens aiding and abetting this type of exploitation in the first place of the recipient who is kept on a direct relief basis and in second place the major governments who through the swelling up of the relief lists find the costs higher than need be if the slogan, "if a job is worth doing it is worth paying for," were adopted.

To quote a specific case in this regard we have statements on file from a coal company which is controlled by Mr. Starky, where a request was sent to the relief office instead of the employment office for miners. These men were sent out and worked for six days during which time the particular cases we are referring to each man was paid as per statement of this company for 34½ cars at 30 cents per car, $10.35 at 3½ sets timber, 87 cents, two hours company shift, 75 cents, making a total of $11.97, less deductions for carbide, 43 cents, rent of tools 3 cents, compensation 42 cents, doctor's fees 50 cents, and buss fees 60 cents a total of $1.98, leaving a net balance of $9.99 for the six days work.

We ask the public if they are desirous of encouraging these conditions, if so how would they like to be the ones directly effected.

AN OPEN LETTER

To the Citizens of Alberta: Let us stop to think for five minutes. How much has the present government done for Alberta? How much has the present federal government done for the Dominion of Canada?

Why not vote Liberal? What we need are drastic changes, and definite action. The Liberals are prepared to do this for Alberta and for the Dominion. There is no doubt, but that the Liberals will be successful in the coming elections. Why not give your support?

Personally, I believe that the Liberals will not only be successful in Alberta, but also in the Dominion. It is better to have two governments—provincial and federal—of the same party. Co-operation means, more trade, more industry, more employment. All success to the Liberals. We hope to see them victorious.

A NEW ERA

Editor Bulletin: Hon. R. B. Hanson throws out a challenge to opponents of the government to state their stand with regard to the "New Deal" of Premier Bennett. He states that opponents occupy a position of absolute negation and predicts a "rude awakening for them."

Mr. Hanson, as misiter of trade and commerce, recently issued a statement of the government's official status and work—an example of mutual admiration, etc.—read it and weep. If Mr. Bennett and Company think they are formulating a "New Deal," it is they who are due for the shock, etc.

Says Mr. Hanson, "The government has been so busy keeping the ship of state afloat, preserving the credit of Canada and providing for the amelioration of the conditions of the unemployed, etc., that it has been unmindful of its own existence." Yes, we add and also indifferent to the existence of most of the people of Canada, who in turn have not noticed any effort or effect of government stabilization.

Mr. Bennett adds, that "What we have endured the past five years is too much to go through unmindful." Quite so, and he has been on the bridge, totally unmindful of those down in the scupper and stokehold — mere pawns.

The writer, takes up the challenge and asks wherein a thing is new, the outstanding facts of which have been proclaimed by many, the writer included, for 20 years or more. It is also asked wherein the leaders of any of the great factions have participated in the struggle for the mere food necessities of life, or the hardships co-existent with the providing of shelter, warmth, etc.

The only men who can and will accomplish the necessary reforms are those in whom the great principle of Socialism is bred and who live it naturally, not assume it, as a cloak to attain a goal at any price.

Recently Mr. E. W. Beatty made the statement that "the world was flooded with the ideas and opinions of men of little understanding." Undoubtedly, he was referring to opponents of his idea of government. Why do such as he assume the prerogative of control? The writer has at times studied and acted upon well thought and taught understandings of men, but as is the usual course in this world and era of contradiction, has seen organizations and systems gobble them up and garble them beyond description and as publicly expressed a decade ago, enslaving man to ranging degrees as dupes. Better a well thought understanding by one individual, based upon oracles of repute, than a set dogma, arbitrarily fixed by a system or society. Proof of all things is in the consequences and we see, after centuries of socalled safe and sober, and sound administration, a state of things analogous to a volcano, or earthquake.

These are but metaphors—the wise can comprehend, the fulfilment certain. It was truly said by one of old, "Faith without works is dead." By this axiom we strive to purge our conscience and come clean to the limits of knowledge and justice, based upon intelligence and understanding.

Men of finance deplore the abandoning of such sound methods as, "sinking funds." So would many, possibly, if their means of living, monopoly and control were bound up in such egretions. Then examine the broad-minded! Bonds, debentures and refunding system and the only source of wealth we know of, production, and the basic issues of labor and knowledge.

It is by "cranks" that the motion of progress is renewed and self starters again and again revived from the battery of energy and vision.

Thank God that a new era has approached, that we who see it, recognize in it, the great jubilee of earth.

ONE MEANS TEST

Editor Bulletin: I would like to know what R. B. Bennett's financial rating was when he took over the Premiership, and if he tightened up his own belt as he told others to do, and forced hungary people to go in want in the midst of plenty.

Is his financial rating lower now than it was then? If this is so then one don't have to doubt his sincerity. If his financial rating is not lower then he stole the confidence of the people.

Care and Management of POULTRY

MODERN METHODS OF INCUBATION

The old method of setting a hen or small incubator to obtain your baby chicks requirements has about reached the vanishing point. Modern methods of incubation has in a great measure relieved the farmer and poultryman or woman from this arduous task. Most big centres now have established large commercial hatcheries where day old chicks may be purchased at nominal cost from a dozen to many thousand and giving the purchaser the privilege of getting all they require at one time and of the same age. Many of these hatcheries are now able to give the purchaser, if so desired Sexed Day Old Pullets, thus doing away with the necessity of having to purchase a large quantity of unsexed chicks in order to secure sufficient Pullets of the number required. This modern method of separating the sexes of day old chicks is no longer in the experimental stage. There are two systems in general use, the Japanese and American, both giving satifactory results and any expert operator of either system should be able to guarantee 90 per cent correct in either sex.

Do not be misled by some who may tell you chick sexing is harmful or injurious to the chicks, when performed by an expert, they are not harmed. You get nothing but the most vigorous, for example when the operator picks up the chick to discern the sex any imperfections or defects are at once observed and those showing any disqualifications are culled out and none but the best are sexed. This modern method gives the purchaser the privilege of securing all of either sex required and permits more room for a greater number of chicks and by not having to overcrowd the brooder, mortality is reduced to the minimum, growth is more rapid and development is greatly enhanced, and if pullets chosen they are brought into production much earlier and in better physical condition.

This is also applicable to the cockerels. They develop into broilers much sooner and you have a better opportunity to select the most promising as breeding stock and dispose of those not so good as broilers.

More later as to the different types to select when sexing to produce better future progeny.

Varsity Law Club Holds Smart Hop

The Law club of the University of Alberta entertained at a smart formal ball Friday evening. The decorations were unique, yet very fitting. The lounge of Athabasca was fitted up like a court and behind the "bench" sat the orchestra, each with a wig, judge-like, and garbed as a judge. The dining room was, in contrast, fitted up and furnished as a prison and the waitresses wore convict suits. Much credit is due the executive of the Law club, which consists of: Hon. president, Dean Weir; president, Ed. McCormack; secretary, Mary Duncan; vice-president, Harold Riley; treasurer, Len Sayers; and first-year representative, Alan MacDonald. The patronesses were: Mrs. Harvey, Mrs. R. C. Wallace, Mrs. McIntyre and Miss Florence E. Dodd.

In The Mood Of The Blue Danube

A handsome evening gown of Alice blue taffeta, appropriately called "A Waltz Dress," has a romantic off-the-shoulder neckline and a bouffant skirt that billows as one waltzes the Blue Danube. An enormous bow of self material is posed on the fitted bodice. It's shown with a luxurious cape of silver-black fox.

Three Co-Eds Only Take Up Law Studies

Numerically, they are only three among many, but in scholastic ability and executive talent they are admitted by their co-students and professors to be the "better half" of the University of Alberta faculty of Law.

The fact that Helen Ford, Kay Bingay and Mary Duncan are the only female students on the local campus enrolled in Law entitles them to certain distinction. But their success in studies in the profession of Portia, together with their accomplishments in student government circles, qualifies them for public recognition.

Miss Ford's accomplishments are legion. One of the outstanding figures in campus law circles, she is one of the U. of A's finest female athletes and is a past president of the Women's Athletic Association. Currently se is one of the star players on the women's senior basketball team, as she has been for some years past. Miss Bingay and Miss Duncan are almost equally accomplished.

University students will long remember the recent debate in which Miss Bingay and Miss Ford successfully argued "That the Women's Place Is in the Home." Such sentiment was far from the Law women's personal feelings, but they willingly sacrificed the furtherance of their own attitude for the sake of their art. Such action bodes ill for "learned friends" in future court cases.

Uncommunicative concerning their plans after graduation, the three students will not surprise their confreres if they become advocates of the first degree. Nor will it surprise their fellow students if, upon being dignified with the titles of "King's Counsel," one or more of the trio in due course of time assumes the robes of a judge. If this should come to pass, it is more than likely that in their court "the quality of mercy would not be strained, but would drop as the gentle dew from heaven."

Weddings

LINKLATER—McINTOSH

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at McDougall manse Saturday, Jan. 19, when Margaret McIntosh, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. McIntosh of Edmonton became the bride of Frank Linklater, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Linklater of Oliver. The bride looked lovely in a gown of white silk crepe and carried a bouquet of carnations. Miss Gladys Johnson of Edmonton acted as bridesmaid and Mr. James Linklater, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. After the ceremony a reception and wedding breakfast was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. S. Johnson of Edmonton.

Mix Best Cough Remedy At Home. Easy! Big Saving!

Beats Them All For Quick, Lasting Relief.

If you want the best remedy for severe coughs, mix it at home. Once tried, you'll never use any other kind, and it's so simple and easy.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its healing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Put the Pinex into a 16 oz. bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you make 16 ozs. of really better medicine than you could buy ready-made for four times the money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

And for quick, lasting relief, it has no equal. You can feel it penetrating the air passages in a way that means business. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

IF HEARSAY can be trusted, Penelope Dudley-Ward, daughter of the Hon. Dudley-Ward of London, England, and Calgary, should make something of a hit in her first picture in England. She is Fenella, a young girl of gentle birth, in love with Carol Sanger, in the new Bergner film, "Escape Me Never!" The part is a dramatic one, and it is said Miss Dudley-Ward has passed all tests with flying colors.

In contrast to Miss Bergner's homely clothes, Miss Dudley-Ward has to wear some lovely creations in the film. One picture frock, in blue and white organdie, has a full flowing skirt, surmounted by a wide blue satin sash. With it is worn a large sun hat made of the same material and having as its only trimming a narrow band of blue satin.

How about a pale blue wedding gown in place of the conventional ivory?

"The chic mid-winter bride will be married in ice-blue satin and tulle," says Adrian, stylist to the movie stars, who accordingly designs a costume of this sort. The material itself is of the palest blue imaginable, almost crystal clear in its flat surfaces, and deep blue in tone where its folds fall into shadows.

Long-sleeved, with a loose tunic top, the skirt of this gown is slit at the hemline enough to allow the material to fall back into a long, full train.

With this dress Adrian would have the bride wear a tulle veil caught at the back of her hair and extending as far as the train itself. An all-white bridal bouquet carries out this lovely color scheme.

Dr. Huxley To Visit Old Friend Here

Dr. Julian Huxley, brilliant English scientist and author, whose visit in Edmonton this week-end will be an event of interest, will be the guest of Dr. William Rowan, professor of zoology at the University of Alberta, and Mrs. Rowan at their Garneau residence. While engaged in research work in London in 1927, Dr. Rowan met Julian Huxley, with whom he had corresponded for some months before, and from then on their friendship grew. They lunched together weekly, and "talked shop," as Dr. Rowan expresses it, discussing scientific investigations in migration and embryology being made at the time. Dr. Huxley, described as a "mine of spontaneous information," has never narrowed his interests to his own particular field of science. At one time he was undecided whether to continue in science or to devote himself wholly to literature, as his famous brother, Aldous Huxley, has done. He is a lover of music and the arts. His wife, a daughter of a prominent old English family, did not accompany her husband on this trip. Fortunately, too, for even in his eagerness to see Canada, he would hardly have chosen to be snowbound in the Rockies indefinitely. It is hoped that Dr. Huxley will arrive in Edmonton in time to fill his engagements of meetings and conferences. His itinerary includes, for Monday, a lecture to the students at the University of Alberta in Convocation Hall, and on Monday evening he will address a mass meeting under the auspices of the National Council of Education.

Dr. and Mrs. Rowan are entertaining at a game dinner at their home on Sunday evening for Dr. Huxley. Short trips through the country are also planned for him.

Social Affairs Make Session Gay at Ottawa

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—Hon. R. J. Manion, minister of railways and canals, and Mrs. Manion, will entertain at a week-end tea for sessional visitors in the capital tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. Britton Brock, Vancouver, B.C., who is spending the sessional months in Ottawa with her father, Hon. Grote Stirling, minister of national defence, was the guest of honor at a smart luncheon given by Mrs. J. D. Fraser, wife of Major Fraser, of Rockcliffe Park.

In honor of Hon. J. L. Bowman, newly appointed speaker of the House of Commons, and Mrs. Bowman, a delightful luncheon was given Thursday by Hon. T. G. Murphy, minister of the interior, and Mrs. Murphy, when covers were laid for 20 guests. Spring flowers were used to adorn the table.

Hon. J. H. King, who has been in Ottawa since the opening of parliament, on his way home from a world trip, has left for Vancouver, B.C.

Hon. R. J. Manion entertained Thursday at luncheon for parliamentarians when covers were laid for 30.

STRATHCONA LODGE MARKS BURNS NIGHT

Celebrating its tenth annual Burns' Night, Strathcona Lodge No. 77, A. F. & A. M., staged a banquet in the Masonic Hall, Wednesday evening. Members of Dominion Lodge, No. 117, joined with Strathcona Lodge in commenorating the birthday of the immortal Scotch bard. Bro. Alex. M. Mitchell presided as chairman.

The haggis was brought to the festive board with the traditional honors, Bro. Alex. Thomson leading the way with the bagpipes and Bro. Leslie E. Macintosh doing the honors.

A feature of the program was the address on "The Immortal Memory of Robert Burns," delivered by Bro. A. M. Matheson, M.L.A.

Appreciations were expressed by Bro. Wilfred Holdsworth, W.M. of Strathcona Lodge.

The following artists contributed to the program: the Aeolian Ladies' Trio, Florence M. Shaw, Phyllis McHaffie, Edna Karran; soprano solo, Salome B. Townend, L.A.B.; violin solo, Florence Shaw; vocal duet, Salome Townend and Will Townend; tenor solo, Bro. Will Cromb; baritone solo, Bro. Will Townend; accompanist, Bro. Herbert Wild.

Hope Mission Aided 291 Families

At the board meeting recently held at Hope Mission reports disclosed that 291 families had been assisted in various ways during December, including 247 Christmas hampers besides the usual distribution of food, clothing, etc., during the month, to a total value of $2,517.79. A number of extremely needy cases were helped in this way. Only through the generosity of the many friends who so kindly contributed toward these needs was it made possible. The staff and members of the board hereby thank all who have so liberally assisted in various ways.

Special thanks is due the Edmonton Bulletin for their co-operation in bringing these needs before the public during recent months.

Hope Mission must continue its ministry and as far as possible help the many needy ones who in these trying times require assistance.

POETRY IS DISCUSSED

"Assaying in the Royal Mint of Words" was the title of a scholarly and very interesting address given by Mr. H. R. Leaver, before the Edmonton Branch, Canadian Authors' Association, on Wednesday evening, at the home of Mr. D. Walter Thomson.

Quoting from different types of poetry, Mr. Leaver debated the relative values of "sound" and "significance" of words.

A brisk discussion followed the address, but no definite decision could be given, though the burden of proof on the sound side, was apparent.

Arrangements were made for Magazine Night, to be held in February, when members contribute unsigned manuscripts, which are read and criticized.

Guests and members present were: Mrs. J. A. Clarke, Mr. S. H. Churchill, Mrs. J. R. Bercov, Miss N. O. Burkholder, Miss G. Maddock, Mr. H. R. Leaver, Mr. R. R. MacPherson, Mr. A. R. Van Horne, Mr. A. R. Willis, Mr. and Mrs. George Thomson, Mr. D. Walter Thomson and Mrs. Scouten.

Suggestions Are Given For Grooming Dogs

Following are some suggestions given by the Junior Hospital League for preparation of dogs for entrance in the second annual Dog Show being held in the Hudson's Bay, March 1 and 2:

PREPARING SPRINGER AND COCKER SPANIEL FOR SHOW

Head and Ears—All whiskers and long hair on face removed. Hair should be trimmed well back to ears and from over skull and tops of ears, so as to make the ears appear to hang from the side of the head, and hang as close to the head as possible. Take care not to leave any "bare spots" when trimming.

Neck—The neck should be cleared from all throatiness, made to look strong and muscular and well set on shoulders, nicely arching, and tapering towards head.

Body—It should be trimmed so as to take out all curls and as many waves as possible; do not trim hair from under chest because the body should appear deep chested and well sprung ribs. Stern should be trimmed so as to appear a little lower than the level of the back.

Forelegs and Shoulders—Shoulders should be trimmed to show good muscles. Forelegs should be trimmed a little in the front showing the legs straight, leaving all fringe at the back.

Hindlegs—Should be trimmed so as to show moderately bent hocks. Do not take too much fringe from hind-quarters.

Coat—It should appear as close and as straight as possible.

Take great care in trimming as formation of dog goes a long way towards a win.

Wire Haired Fox Terriers—The wire haired fox terrier requires stripping with a standard stripping knife about six to eight weeks prior to the show. By this is meant the long hair is removed leaving the undercoat. Do not remove hair on hind quarters as it must be longer than coat on back to denote strength. Coat on front legs and brisket and lower part of body must not be removed. Three weeks before show again strip neck and tail, and ten days before show clean skull, cheeks, and ears. In doing this draw an imaginary line from outer portion of eye to mouth, leaving all hair and whiskers to denote a strong muzzle and produce a box-like effect. During period of preparation daily grooming is essential, with a stiff brush. Certain weaknesses in fox terriers can be covered up by expert trimming. Prior to benching your terrier rub damp white chalk into coat, and when dry brush out. This will give your dog the much desired flat white coat, and will also keep the coat in place. A slip over show ring leash is very desirable, as it emphasizes the length and grace of a fox terrier's neck.

Sealyham Terrier—Preparation of a Sealyham terrier is similar in many respects to that of a wire, eyebrows should be trimmed about three quarters of an inch in length to give keenness of expression. The whiskers should be left long enough to cause jaw to appear the same thickness and depth as skull. Sealyhams should be trimmed to enhance and accentuate strength and muscular development. A write up can be built up from the notes on wire haired trimming.

Bouillon and Orange Juice Diet Clara's Standby For Keeping Slim

By GLADYS GLAD
"America's Most Famous Beauty"

CLARA BOW

The vivacious Clara Bow, who just recently gave birth to a bouncing baby boy, has one of the shapeliest figures on the silver screen. Clara, however, rather inclines to plumpness. She tends to gain weight quite easily. And so generally, when she begins to gain extra poundage she goes on a bouillon and orange juice diet. This diet is one of Clara's old standbys. And she thinks it a most effective one for keeping her figure slender and shapely.

Of course any woman who is a great deal overweight really needs a more thorough reducing routine, like the one in my "New Figure" booklet. But there are many women, too, who don't need to follow as complete a routine as that. Women, for instance, who are only about six, eight or ten pounds overweight can follow a much simpler diet routine in order to trim down their figures to the desired slenderness. And one of the best ones for this purpose is the vegetable bouillon diet that Clara advocates.

In this dieting routine, nothing should be consumed for six days but clear, vegetable bouillon. Orange juice or a little weak coffee may be substituted for the bouillon at breakfast, but luncheons and dinners should consist only of the clear vegetable bouillon. At least six or eight glasses of the bouillon should be consumed each day, and they need not only be taken at luncheon and dinner time. For the dieter may take a glass whenever she begins to feel especially hungry or weak.

This vegetable bouillon diet should not be continued for more than six days at most. And during the dieting period, the juice of four oranges should be taken each day in addition to the bouillon. After the six days, the dieter should return to a normal diet. This doesn't mean that she can relapse into her former incorrect habits of eating and still preserve her newly-acquired slim figure lines, however. But if she eats sanely and wisely, her slender, well-shaped figure will not merely be a temporary result of the bouillon diet, but will be lasting.

ANSWER TO QUERIES
Standard Weight

Shirley: I think that a girl 14 years of age, and five feet, two inches in height should weigh about 110 pounds.

Complexion

Miss Lewis, Cora and Ellen: My methods of treating pimples, blackheads, large pours and superficial skin defects are contained in my "Beauty Culture" booklet. The processes are too long to print here.

Cosmetics

Yetta: I think that a soft peach shade of powder, soft orange rouge, and light lipstick would blend harmoniously with your coloring.

Flattering For Lounging

Wife Joint Owner Man's Pay Cheque

DEAR MISS DIX.—I am a married woman with two children. I have a husband who is good in every way except for one fault. He gives money that we cannot afford to his brother whenever he asks for it. We are poor, working hard trying to pay for our own home, and I save every nickel I can to help. I get so discouraged when I see the money that I have slaved and pinched pennies for being handed over to some one else, but if I say anything to my husband he gets angry. I have brothers and sisters who are worse off than his brother, but I do not think that I would be doing right if I gave his hard-earned money to them, and he would be furious if I did. My husband admits that his brother is a waster. Do you think it is fair for my husband to do this, or am I selfish in objecting to it? I would like your opinion.

PUZZLED WIFE.

Dorothy Dix

Answer:

You are perfectly justified in resenting your husband's impoverishing you for the sake of his brother. He has no right to take the money that you have helped earn and that you have saved, penny by penny, in order that you may have a home and some protection in your old age, to give to any one else, and when he does so he is giving you a rotten deal.

Of course, he thinks that the money belongs exclusively to him because he brings in the pay envelope, but the wife who cooks and washes and scrubs to make a comfortable home has earned the money just as much as he has and has just as much right to say what shall be done with it.

No man has a right to sacrifice his wife to his family. When a man marries a woman the Good Books says that he should leave father and mother and sister and brother and cleave only unto her. Certainly he should not make his wife slave and economize to support able-bodied sisters and brothers.

Yet many men who think they are good men and who really love their wives are so obsessed by their families that they never consider the cruel injustice they do their wives when they let their families bleed them of every cent.

DOROTHY DIX.

SHE PLAYS ORGAN AT 75 YEARS

Takes Kruschen to Keep Rheumatism Away

Writing to tell how she keeps her activity, this wonderful old woman states:—

"My hands were becoming so crippled that I had to give up piano and organ playing—and almost entirely gave up knitting. I have been using Kruschen Salts for nearly two years ,and am very pleased with the result. Last August I played two church services on the organ ,and hope to do so again this August. My fingers are nearly straight, and quite supple and I am 75. I have recommended Kruschen Salts to many people."—A.A.C.

The six mineral salts of Kruschen have a direct effect upon the whole bloodstream, neutralizing uric acid, which is the recognized cause of rehumatism. They also restore the elminating organs to proper working order, and so prevent constipation, thereby checking the further formation of uric acid and other body poisons which undermine the health.

Your Children - By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Training a baby to help himself is of more importance than appears at once to the eye. We look at him and see only a little dependent creature who seems to be utterly incapable of doing anything constructive. And, of course, for the most part he is.

O. R. Barton

However he is utterly filled with potentialities, and it is wrong to see only the side that looks to us for everything.

As almost everyone knows now, physical training is the entering wedge to character training. The regular routine of hours, itself a discipline, makes him pleasant to live with because he accepts life as it comes without too much rumpus or fight.

But this is after all a sort of passive affair, and the mother will have to make up her mind whether or not she wants to let it go at until he is older.

DANGER IN DELAY

The only trouble with waiting too long for this fairy of capability to wave its wand is that it never may show up at all. Children today grow into manhood and womanhood with the infant idea that they are not called on terribly to do very much for themselves; when necessity drives they resent doing things not entirely to their liking.

So it seems that the earlier the tiny grains of self-help are coaxed to grow, the kinder we are being to the future citizen who is to find life filled with things to be done, a responsibility we cannot evade.

I do not think it too early to begin at two when each new day is another game and every new experience a thrill.

One cannot say to a tot of two, "Now come and help mother. Clear up the room and put away your blocks." By some miracle he might do so and obey the order. But he isn't ready for many abstract commands yet.

The secret of all training is to deal with each stage of babyhood and childhood as mental development enlarges. The "command" to do a thing for next time, because there is no "interest" attached.

The baby is interested only in play. So the means to our end—self help—must be through play.

GAMES AID TRAINING

By little cheerful games a mother can teach her little boy or girl to "put away the bunny's overshoes." To hold his own spoon and "eat it all up like the boy in the picture." To hop right up on the bathroom stool and wash his hands "quick, quick before daddy comes and says, 'All that dirt on Harry's hands.'"

Little excitements, little games, little references to things he knows, rousing small pride and co-operation. This is the beginning. It may seem unimportant, but a beginning of any constructive habit is never that.

It sets the habit of directing energy to a purpose. It puts an end eventually to waiting for someone else to do it. Before long this very baby will be originating his own ideas of self help. Later on will come the time that he will have to do the things he does not care for. Then he will be ready for that, too, but not in early babyhood. To be cross and force him too much may kill the germ of duty at its very inception. The little child learns most quickly through happiness and interest. It is a matter removed from obedience. It is the direction of energy, the budding of duty.

Good Taste

By Francine Markel

The host or hostess who invites guests for a motor ride and stops somewhere en route for refreshments should assume responsibility for all expenditures.

But this rule would not prevail if one of the guests should insist on paying the bill, or if he has previously arranged to do so.

BY FAY PARKER

JASPER, Jan. 26.—It took more than sub-zero weather to stop the Edson Juveniles from challenging the Jasper Juveniles last Saturday night and the games was worthier of a larger crowd of fans than braved the icy cold. The score was 3-1 in favor of Jasper. Farewell's snappy Edson players made the first score of the game in the second period when Stewart Thurber tucked one away. He also took the big box of chocolates donated by George Korchinsky for the first goal in the game. T. McGuire and R. Webb scored for Jasper in that same frame. G. Bonner got another for the home team in the final period. Lineup for Edson: S. Morris, R. Dobson, B. Pattinson, C. Vining, J. Walker, S. Bridges, S. Thurber, B. Oleneck and L. Leyden. Jasper: C. Powers, L. McGuire, R. Webb, G. Bonner, T. McGuire, J. Ewing, Bob Newman, J. Hogan and H. Webb.

Lunch was served by the social committee which included Mrs. B. Ewing, Mrs. M. Bonner and Mrs. E. McKenzie.

Fish Can Be Made An Interesting Dish

By MARY E. DAGUE

A well-easoned halibut with oyster sauce, flounder with shrimp, rich pink and white on the platter-combinations like these keep fish from being the uninteresting dish it sometimes seems in contemplation.

Sister Mary

Another important item to keep in mind in planning a fish dinner is careful selection of accompanying foods.

Vegetables, salads, desserts, must all be chosen so as to play up and emphasize the fish.

Seasoning is vital, too, and there are many kinds to be suited to the taste: white wine, paprika, curry powder; minced parsley; chives, green pepper; onion; shallot; lemon juice, anchovy paste; grated cheese, tomato paste; chopped sauted mushrooms.

If you can get oyster crabs fry them in butter and sprinkle them over the fish in its sauce just before sending it to the table. As, for instance, in sea bass Persian.

RECIPE FOR COOKING FISH

One fresh sea bass, 2 tablespoons chopped shallots, ½ cup sliced mushrooms, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup white wine, 2 tablespoons heavy cream, minced tarragon, chevril and chives, parsley.

Have the fish split and boned and skinned at the fish market. Butter a shallow pan and put in the shallots and mushrooms and about 2 teaspoons minced parsley. Add butter. On this bed place the prepared fish seasoned with sald and pepper. Pour over wine, cover pan and simmer until tender. Remove fish to hot platter and reduce sauce to one-half cup. Rub 1 tablespoon butter and 1 tablespoon flour together and stir into sauce. Cook and stir until thick. Strain through a fine wire strainer and add cream and 1 tablespoon lobster butter. Heat sauce and mask fish with it. Sprinkle over the minced "fines herbes" and top with the oyster crabs fried well in butter. At one side of the platter arrange potatoes which have been cut in tiny balls and cooked in butter.

With this serve spinach rings filled with diced beets.

SPINACH RINGS

Two pounds spinach, 2 teaspoons prepared horseradish, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon white pepper.

Wash spinach through many waters and cook in water which clings to the leaves. Drain and chop. Add seasonings and pack in well buttered ring molds. Keep hot in a pan of hot water in a moderate oven. Turn out and fill with diced beets seasoned with butter and lemon juice.

A salad of raw cauliflower, shredded green pepper and chopped Spinach onion will add to this menu, and for dessert try sponge cake filled with apricot whip. Bake the sponge cake in individual cakes, cut off the top, scoop out the crumbs and fill the shells with apricot whip. Or you may, if you like, bake one large cake, split it and fill with the whip.

I'm sorta' 'scouraged. They insists Baby must play my games. They says girls is just as cuikable of playin' these games as boys—an' then when she gets hurt they hollers, "Is this the way t' treat a poor little girl?"

What's What

Question—I have a friend who says, "Don't you want to come to dinner tomorrow night?" She never says, "I'd like you to come to dinner" or "Won't you come to dinner—we'd like to have you." I never feel as though I want to go on such an invitation. What do you advise?

D. W.

Answer—While the invitations, as quoted by you, are extremely informal, there appears to be no doubt about the friendly intent. The tendency now seems to be to lessen ceremonious formalities, and to substitute instead the telephoned or vis-vis "Come to dinner." Yet always, the date is named, and that differentiates this sort of invitation from the too casual "Drop in at any time." So, if the friend names a time, accept with an equally cheerful "I'll be glad to come; thank you." Of course the spoken or telephoned invitation does not apply to formal or semiformal dinner parties to which invitations are mailed several days in advance of the date.

Question—What is the best time to give a party for boys and girls from 6 to 8 years of age? The occasion is my little niece's birthday.

PUZZLED AUNT.

Answer—A children's party may be arranged for the Saturday afternoon nearest the date, so that it will neither interfere with school hours or keep the youngsters out after nightfall. Invitations should name the hours—say 2 to 5 o'clock. The hostess should have arranged a program of games and other entertainment in advance.

LADIES' AID FETES BAWLF COUPLE ON 25th ANNIVERSARY

BAWLF, Jan. 26.—An occasion of interest to the community was the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Kvale for which a party was held by the Parkland Ladies' Aid, on January 4.

Mr. and Mrs. Kvale were married a quarter of a century ago by Rev. Klyve of the Lutheran Church at Bawlf and took up residence on their farm north west of Bawlf, where they still reside.

Their children Miss Evelyn, who is attending the Lutheran College at Camrose, Miss Grace and Miss Amy, who reside with their parents on the farm, were present at the reception. During the festivities, the Ladies' Aid presented the bride and bridegroom with a beautiful cake plate and the other guests gave them a well filled purse of silver pieces.

The guests from a distance were: Mrs. Rusel Peterson, Phaton; Mr and Mrs. Gerald Sanden, Mrs. Albert Zemlicka, Mrs. Axel Anderson, Mrs. Sam Lomness; Mrs. Nils Norman Miss Melby, Mrs. Cleven, Mrs. Ole Aker and Mrs. Loksead, from Bawlf, besides the members of The Aid and neighbors living in the community.

McDOUGALL CLUB HOLDS ELECTION

The Georgina Group of McDougall Mission Circle met on Monday for the annual election of officers. Those appointed were: president, Elizebeth Kay; vice-president, Phylida Housman; press reporter, Ethel Wanda Curry; corresponding secretary, Eleanor Johnston; treasurer, Ida Housman; press reporter, Eehtl Kay; Christian stewardship convener, Edith Fowler; mite box convener, Ethel Montgomery; social convener, Marie Macdougall; secretary of literature, Alice Frederking; music convener and pianist, Ruby Newsom.

As Scouty pried upon the box, he said, "I'm clever as a fox. Just give me lots of time and I will pop this cover loose.

"Whoever put it on, I'd say, sure meant that it was going to stay. I hope that all my work, when I am through, is of some use."

"Keep going," shouted Duncy. "Gee, I hope that you don't call on me. Of course I'd gladly help you, but I'd really rather not.

"You are the one who started out to find out what 'twas all about. I'll cheer you on, lad, to success. That ought to help a lot."

"My goodness, what a thoughtful lad," said Dotty. "Say, you should be glad that we let you stay with us. You are such a lazy boy.

"I think you ought to call a halt on gloominess, and finding fault. Some day, just for the fun of it, why don't you spread some joy?"

This put poor Duncy in his place. A blotch of red spread 'cross his face, as he sat down beside a tree. The rest let him alone.

They watched brave Scouty work a while, and then kind Windy, with a smile, said. "It is time to stop, when such hard labor makes you groan.

"I'll finish up the job, somehow. The lid is coming off, right now." Then Windy gave one real hard jerk that brought a big surprise.

A strange form promptly jumped right out, and then the Tinies heard it shout, "Ah, ha! I'll bet I am a treat for all your little eyes!

"Don't run. There's no cause for alarm. I promise you I mean no harm. I am the old Banana Man You tots have set me free.

"Packed in that box, I had no fun. I couldn't walk, or play or run. Now I am in the open air, as happy as can be."

A SWAN CANNOT FLY FROM A SWIMMING POSITION

It looks easy for a swan gracefully to leave the water and take to the air, but it is more difficult than it appears: for it is impossible for a swan to "take off" directly from a swimming position in the water. The swan must first do exactly what a hydroplane does: it must get a running start on the surface of the water, then take to its wings when sufficient speed has been developed. A swan could not fly off from a small pond of water with a fence around it, for there would not be room enough to get a start

I, Candidate for Governor: And How I Got Licked

By Upton Sinclair

Desperate Need Of Funds Faces Sinclair Followers

This is the ninth instalment of the story of Upton Sinclair and how he got licked for the Governorship of California. This narrative started in The Bulletin December 1, and will continue each Saturday until completed. Back copies of The Bulletin may be obtained upon application.

WE WERE, of course, in desperate need of funds in these last days. Our frail political ship had been all but foundered by the masses of falsehood poured over it by newspapers and radio and pamphlets. We owed the printer, we owed for this, and that. Everybody agreed that by heroic labors we had succeeded in turning the tide against us: it was now flowing in our favor, and with a little money to pay our bills we might actually be able to win.

So here was I in the hillside mansion of my friend X, who had tried to get us three hundred thousand dollars. His proposition now was that the biggest banker in Californi was willing to put ten thousand dollars into our campaign. Said X: "He is sick of the corruption in the affairs of this State, and he doesn't want Merriam to be Governor. He wants to hear just one thing, if you are elected you will appoint an honest man as bank examiner."

MAYBE WANTS TO NAME MAN

I answered: "That's all right; but does he expect to name that honest man?"

"Maybe that's what he wants," replied X, "but if he assumes that and later on finds that he was mistaken, that will be his hard luck. In politics you don't have to be too particular about letting other people make mistakes."

That was all right with me; I had my hands full with looking after my own mistakes. I told my friend I was perfectly willing to tell Giannini that I would appoint an honest man as bank examiner. I would go further and say that I would appoint an honest man to every office in my gift. I would say that to any man, whether a banker or a bootblack.

My friend turned to the telephone and put in a call for A. P. Giannini. This is one of the magical privileges which the rich have prepared for themselves; they can talk with anybody in any part of the civilized world in a minute or two. You don't even have to hang up the receiver and wait to be called, as you used to. It takes only a few seconds more to get someone at a hotel in Washington than it does at the Biltmore or the Ambassador in Los Angeles; and you hear just as clearly—impossible to tell the difference. But you have to have the price!

There I was talking with "A. P." I told him that the President had spoken of him. I told him that if I were elected, the first thing I intended to do was to appoint qualified men to public office, and that would include the bank examiner. He replied that we ought to have the support of the Administration; somebody ought to come out to California by airplane immediately and speak for us. He said that the man to do it was J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, a Californian, and a recognized emissary of the Administration. I should call McIntyre, the President's secretary, at once, and serve a demand for "Jefty," as they call him, to leave by airplane that afternoon. All that in the name of a great banker!

It was, if I remember correctly, Sunday noon, nine days before the election. Mr. McIntyre was not in, but would be back shortly. He was reported to be at this place and at that. We had possibly half a dozen messages; he would call us back, and so on. I had lunch at my fiend X's home, waiting for the call. Finally it came. McIntyre told me that it would be perfectly all right for O'Connor to come, but that it would have to be a personal matter, and I would have to ask it from him.

"That is a good sign," said my friend X, and he talked again with "A. P." and "A. P." thought it was a good sign. "A. P." had talked with "Jefty," and I should now ask "Jefty." So there began another spell of telegraphing and telephoning. First, "Jefty" accepted my invitation—he would come that day. Then he telegraphed that he had changed his mind; there were too many factions in the Democratic party of California. I spoke with him again over the telephone, and told him: "There are no factions in the Democratic party of California. There are only Democrats and Republicans." "Jefty" laughed and got my point. Finally he said that he would take the plane and see me in Los Angeles on the following morning.

ANOTHER BIG SENSATION

So there was another big sensation in the California campaign. How it leaked I have no idea. Very certainly I didn't say a word. But the newspapers learned that "Jefty" had started, and they reported that he was coming on behalf of the Administration, to ask me to withdraw in favor of Raymond Haight. Where had that come from? "Jefty" stated most emphatically that he had never made any such statement.

He arrived, and my friend went to see him in his hotel, and brought him to his home, where he talked for two hours. He proved to be a mild and unassuming person, frank about everything except California politics. I supplied the frankness about that. I told what I had hoped for from the President, and the many falsehoods our enemies were printing; then I left it for "Jefty" to make his decision. He said that he would consult others.

I learned afterwards that he spent two hours with Haight and two with Merriam—exact impartiality. I assume that he also spent some time with "Ham" Cotton, head of the Public Works Administration in Los Angeles, and principal distributor of Federal patronage next to Senator McAdoo—who, by the way, had gone to Mexico, and then to Washington, keeping out of the campaign.

As to what happened behind the scenes, your guess is as good as mine. All I know is what I read in the papers. "Jefty" told the reporters that he had come out on personal business. He told them he had not yet made up his mind whom he was going to vote for. If he finally made up his mind he never told me. He didn't come out for me, he didn't come out for Haight, and he didn't come out for Merriam. The lies which the "Ham" Cotton crowd had been circulating stood uncontradicted. A. P. Giannini didn't contribute ten thousand dollars, nor yet ten cents, to the expenses of the End Poverty League; and so he is not going to get an honest man appointed bank examiner of the State of California. But a few days later it was reported that J. F. T. O'Connor had been appointed to take charge of the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco, at $24,000 a year, or twice what he had been getting.

RADIO TALKS BEFORE ELECTION

On the night before election I had three radio talks. Over a statewide hook-up at 7:30 I told the people, as I had told them several hundred times before, that it was up to them. I was a believer in Democracy, in the right of the people to decide their own destiny; if they hadn't suffered enough, it was their God-given right to suffer more; all they had to do was to elect Merriam and he would see to it. I told them that the depression was going right on, until we had replaced the broken-down system of production for profit by an ordered system of production for use. I told them that regardless of what might be the outcome of tomorrow's verdict, we who understood the causes of the crisis were going on to educate the people, and sooner or later they would act in their own interests.

At nine or thereabouts I had fifteen minutes over KNX, and Governor Merriam was to follow me over the same station at the next period. I was allowed to speak extemporaneously, and I played a mean trick on the old gentleman. I told the audience all the things they were not going to hear him say. He wasn't going to tell them how he would deal with the problem of unemployment, and he wasn't going to tell them how he would meet the State's deficit. I told them the empty platitudes they would hear—and I learned afterwards from people in the studio that I had got under the old gentleman's skin, for everything I said about his prepared speech was correct. I had another period at eleven o'clock, and for the benefit of whatever voters had stayed up that late, I pointed out how my opponent had backed me up.

Epia-ist

HARRY L. HOPKINS,
who not only would save California from starvation but has a plan to end poverty in America.

CHAPTER 37

Election day. My wife and I cast our votes in the morning, and I obliged the camerman and newsreel operators — although feeling certain in my own mind that those shots would never be used.

The rest of the day we stayed at home expecting to rest; but the telephone kept ringing, with messages from headquarters and other places, where members of our lawyers' committee were carrying on the fight against frauds at the polls. This is an aspect of the campaign which I have not discussed. We knew what was being prepared. We knew that every agency of corruption and intimidation in California had been marshalling its forces for that day. We knew that our voters had been listed for challenge, and that threats against them had caused thousands who were ignorant of their rights to decide that the safest course was to stay at home.

Merriam Is Forced To Abandon Many Life Long Policies

We knew also of the plans for the stuffing of ballot boxes and the turning in of false returns. A series of incidents had occurred, connected with a proposal to bring from New York a group of men who were familiar with these arts. Some of our friends had worked in New York, and explained our purposes; the upshot being that this particular gang decided not to take the Los Angeles money. I was confirmed in my conclusion that I would rather deal with gamblers and the underworld than with the big business crowd which rules our State.

I had the consciousness of having done my best, and was prepared to take serenely what I knew was coming. I expected a worse defeat than I got — having relied too much upon the "Literary Digest." A few friends came to our home that evening and we listened over the radio. In the first precinct that reported, soon after the polls closed, Merriam was leading me by four to one, and I thought it was going to be that way straight through. But soon it became evident that we had got an enormous vote, and for a while there seemed a possibility that when the industrial districts of Los Angeles were heard from, we might get out in front.

SINCLAIR AND WIFE IN AWKWARD SPOT

I won't reveal the names of our friends or how they behaved. Suffice it to say, that my wife and I were the least unhappy persons in that company, and we were in the strange position where it didn't seem decent to say how we felt. If we smiled at the funeral, what would the other mourners think? But in my heart were things such as this: I can drive my own car again! I can go and take my walks! I can sleep with my windows open!

Presently we had to bundle into our cars and make a tour of the radio stations. The National Broadcasting Company had prepared a miracle; at ten-thirty I was to have five minutes in which to tell the audiences of ninety-two stations how I felt about being defeated for Governor of California. The alleged Federal regulations were forgotten; I didn't have to "file copy," and was free to say what I pleased. Half an hour later the same privilege was extended by the Columbia chain, sixty-seven stations, if I remember. And then, at eleven-fifteen, KNX turned over its fifty thousands watts for me to use as long as I pleased.

At the first of these stations Governor Merriam preceded me. We were supposed to speak from the same room, but this honor I refused. I have never cultivated the arts of pretense, and I didn't care to exchange courtesies with such a man. I meant to speak out of my heart that night.

I was told afterwards that many people considered that I showed myself "a poor sport," "a bad loser," and so on. I was prepared for that. I was not playing a game, and there was no "sport" about it; I was voicing the anguish of a million suffering people in California. I was fighting for their rights, and making no truce with their enemies. The election had been won by a campaign of character assassination, and Merriam had permitted that campaign, and now was profiting by it.

I owed him no favors, and showed him none. I conceded that the election had been stolen, and that we would try to prove the theft. I said that the EPIC movement was going right on. We would show the people how Merriam failed to carry out his campaign promises, and in six months we would start a movement to recall him. We would make our preparations to spread our End Poverty League over the entire United States, and we would not quit until every man and woman in our country who needed work had been given the right to work and enjoy the product.

FELT CRIME HAD BEEN COMMITTED

People who heard me said that I was menacing that night; one said that I "roared." Maybe so. I have told in these pages what I had endured for six months or more. I felt that a crime had been committed, not against me, but against the people. It was their rage that I was voicing, not my own. The ruling classes of America were listening to me—certainly the ruling classes of California were, and I told them: "We will hang the threat of a recall as a sword over Merriam's head." Maybe that accounts for the fact that the new Governor-elect has not yet forgotten his campaign promises, a whole month afterward!

I had no chance to visit any of our headquarters that night, but I was told of dreadful scenes. Men and women broke down and wept, when the certainty of our defeat became apparent. I know of women who cried the whole night through, and doubtless there were thousands. I know of one suicide, and at least one other attempt. The million-and-a-quarter hungry and desolate people had been hoping for deliverance, and suddenly their hopes were dashed.

My friend Lewis Browne was present in the studios of KNX and listened to me "roar." He followed me, and spoke his thoughts, brave fellow that he is. He, too, was deeply moved, and was amused afterwards to hear from his friends that he had "talked like a revolutionist." This broad-minded scholar and wit, who writes histories of the world's religions and biographies of its philosophers and poets, and who lectures to the students of U.C.L.A. under the auspices of Red-baiting provost—well, Lewis' words were not preserved, and perhaps I shouldn't tell on him! Instead, I will tell on his wife, Myna, an artist, who selected the cartoons which accompany this narrative. There were several hundred of them, and I told her to take the meanest, but she couldn't bear to!

To finish the story of the election and its results: The official figures have not been issued as yet, but Merriam received about 1,100,000. I received 875,000, and Haight about 300,000. It thus appears that Merriam is a minority Governor by a small margin. He and his masters will not fail to make note of that fact.

Brainery

CHAPTER 38

I have finished the story of the campaign, and now have to comment on its significance to the people of California and the rest of the country.

The victory of Merriam was not a victory for reaction. One of our achievements during the campaign was that we forced the old gentleman completely out of his lifelong position. Before the fight was over he had announced himself as "heartily in accord with President Roosevelt's policies." He proved it in a genuine and touching way — by dumping onto Roosevelt's shoulders all the gravest of his problems—old age pensions, unemployment insurance, relief for the destitute, and the 30-hour week.

This sudden conversion of a Republican of the school of Mark Hanna to the most alarming of brain-trust ideas suggests a curious problem. You will recall J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, coming out from Washington and having a two-hour conference with Merriam. You may be sure that "Ham" Cotton had conferences with Merriam and that the Cotton emissaries to Washington carried proposals from Merriam.

Let me make plain: I am not suggesting that President Roosevelt had any part in such a deal. He leaves political matters very largely to Jim Farley and his lieutenants; and in dealing with State political machines these gentlemen have to take things as they find them, and do their best to get what the Administration needs. If the Republican Governor of a key state like California were to agree to come out for the New Deal, and to distribute a reasonable amount of patronage to the Democrats who had supported him, it might then become possible for Federal funds to be entrusted to the handling of so friendly and obliging a statesman. I have shown how such arrangements were made between the Democratic and Republican machines in New York. Why should not the same bipartisan alliance be extended to national affairs? In England they have a dignified name for it, a "coalition government," and its purpose is to put down labor and Socialism. Why should the methods not be applied to California, to keep the Governorship from falling into the ahnds of an "atheist and agent of Moscow?"

Opposition Adopts Program Proposed In Epic Platform

The Governor-elect waited only two or three days after the election before taking over the EPIC Plan. He announced in a speech that the unemployed must have work, and that, much opposed as he was to the idea of letting them produce for barter, he would adopt it as a matter of temporary necessity. He reiterated his promise for a 30-hour week, and incredible as it may seem, he broached a State income tax. The State Controller had just announced that the State's deficit was going to amount to $65,000,000 by the first of July; and Merriam, God help him, has to deal with the problem. Up to election night he kept mum; but once elected, he announced we might have to have a State income tax.

That was more than the Los Angeles "Times" could endure, and it gave the new Governor-elect a slap on the wrist: "California is at the cross-roads; her troubles did not end with the defeat of Sinclair. If California continues sane; if she uses the most effective means of defense against the infiltration of mass-insanity; then California may become a focal point from which sanity will spread outward. But this cannot happen if our leaders try to palliate lunacy by adopting some of the folly of the lunatics." Reading that, you can see why I don't feel so cast down over the results of the election!

MOLEY BUSY VISITING BANKERS

The developments from Washington have been even more cheering. I told of President Roosevelt's statement that he intended to come out in favor of production for use, and how on October 23 I waited in San Francisco for his speech and did not hear it. At that time the President and his friend, Professor Moley, were interviewing bankers and big business men, and reports in the newspapers were all to the "right." But now the election is over, and the people who are visiting the President are Hopkins and Ickes and Tugwell; they are discussing the problem of relief, and a sudden silence falls upon the great press of California—not one word do we get! But the New York papers reach us four days late—and what is this leaking out? It appears that Mr. Hopkins has a plan which he calls EPIA, and it means "End Poverty in America." Well, well, well!

Mr. Hopkins, reports the New York "Times" of December 2, 1934, does not believe in the "dole." Unlike other Washington officials, he calls it that, and rejects it in favor of what he calls "work relief." Being a tactful and clever man, Mr. Hopkins some time ago set out very quietly to apply his plans on a small scale. He now proposes to apply them to the extent of eight or nine billion dollars, and proposes the slogan, End Poverty in America.

HERE'S PROGRAM FOR EPIA

What is this program? The New York "Times" tells us as follows:

"An expansion of the subsistence homesteads and rural rehabilitation programs to include as many families as need such accommodations or are in a position to accept them.

"A large-scale removal of families from sub-marginal (unprofitable) land to home sites where they can live on a more civilized scale.

"Federal advances of funds to both catergories to equip their homesteads with tools, livestock, etc.

"An expansion of the program already in progress on an experimental scale to give factory work to the idle, through what the FERA softly calls 'canning centres,' 'needle-craft centres,' or the like.

"A large-scale low-cost housing program to shelter those unable for one reason or another to move to subsistence homesteads, since it appears there is no purpose entirely to depopulate the large cities.

"A social insurance program to give security in the future."

And the "Times" account makes comment:

"All this has a strangely familiar ring to those who can recall the dear, dead days before November 6 when EPIC was a word to make capitalists crawl under the bed. Upton Sinclair proposed to have the State of California take over idle farms and put jobless populations to work on them. He proposed to have the State commandeer idle factories and make jobs for unemployed city workers. In each case the owners would receive a fair rental and the products would be sold at cost, distributed under State supervision. Mr. Hopkins' plan differs from Mr. Sinclair's in detail, but not in principle."

Nearly sixteen months ago, starting our campaign to End Poverty in California, I stated to audiences in substance:

"It doesn't make much difference whom you elect as Governor of California, production for use by the unemployed is coming, because there is no other way to save our State from bankruptcy. It doesn't make much difference what President Roosevelt's ideas may be, or what he may be planning; he will establish production for use for the unemployed, because there is no other way to save our nation from bankruptcy. Four-fifths of our people cannot much longer carry one-fifth upon their backs, and when we have tired of keeping people in idleness, there is nothing we can do about it but give them access to land and machinery, and let them go to work and produce for themselves."

OPEN MINDS OF PEOPLE TO REALITY

The purpose for which I entered the campaign was to open people's minds to that reality; and if I have been able to do that, it matters nothing to me whether the job is done by a reactionary Republican Governor, or by a progressive Democratic President, or by a bipartisan alliance. What do I care if they pay me the compliment of adopting my slogan, as the genial Harry Hopkins has done, or if they declare it a purely temporary expedient, having no relation whatever to the "lunacy" of Upton Sinclair? You may be sure that every one of the 875,000 persons in California who voted for EPIC will recognize our plan, regardless of Merriam's label; even some of those who voted for Merriam may recognize it!

On the evening that Merriam made his speech, saying that the unemployed would have to be allowed to go to work in a barter system, a friend in our home sat down heavily upon the bed and broke it down. So next morning he drove over to the lumber yard to buy a bed slat. He found the man in charge of the yard in excited controversy with two or three others. "What's the matter?" said my friend, as he got out of his car, and the answer was: "It's this blankety-blank Merriam. They persuaded me this fellow Sinclair was a Communist, and they got me to vote for Merriam, and look here now, he's gone and adopted the other fellow's whole program!"

WE ARE NOW DEMOCRATIC PARTY

I stated in my speeches and editorials, again and again:

"We are now the Democratic party, and we intend to remain the Democratic party."

That was my challenge to those who deserted us for Merriam, and who now think that they can run the Democratic party.

But I didn't mean by that, and I never thought of meaning, that the EPIC movement should sink its identity in the Democratic party.

In the first place, there are many parts of the State where the reactionaries retained control, and the county central committees refused to endorse the State ticket, and in some cases repudiated it.

In these places the EPIC clubs will continue the fight for our program, and will select their own candidates and endeavor to capture the Democratic party machinery at the next primary.

OLD COUNTRY LETTER - - By J. Edward Norcross

MANCHESTER, Eng. (By Mail).—From personal observation I should be inclined to divide the population of England into two parts, not altogether mutually exclusive.

There are, on the one hand, a multitude of performers in amateur theatricals and, on the other, the audiences they attract, which audiences seem to consist largely of people who themselves have appeared on the boards at one time or another or expect to do so sooner or later.

Take one little town where I have been spending a few weeks—Riverton, let us call it—the population of which just manages to run into five figures.

Riverton has three cinemas all of which seem to carry on successfully enough. At this time of year, however, the managers bewail a temporary lack of patronage because everybody is either going to see some amateur show or taking part in one.

For who would bother about a cinema when Charlie Perkins is starring at the annual entertainment of the parish church Sunday school.

J. E. Norcross

Charlie is our new comedian. He is serious enough when behind the counter at Smith's grocery, but he is another Charlie altogether when he emerges from the wings tastefully attired in a silk hat, black morning coat and plus-fours a costume he explains by telling us that the cigarette manufacturers stopped issuing their bonus cards before he had got as far as the striped trousers.

I MAY remark here that our Sunday school entertainments have undergone a tremendous transformation since the dear, dead days of the long ago in which I formerly frequented these parts.

The proceedings were always opened with prayer in the pre-Georgian era. Little girls, in starched white frocks and pink sashes recited such favorites as "Little Jim," "Beth Gelert," and the "May Queen," while little boys prodigiously scrubbed up for the occasion, essayed "Casablanca" and "Excelsior."

The little boys have completely disappeared from the programs nowadays and the little girls, in brightly-colored shorts and not a great deal of anything else, substitute lively, and, truth to tell, very pretty dancing for the "action" songs that delighted their grandparents.

In point of fact, we launch boldly out into "revues" at the parish church Sunday school entertainments nowadays. "Screamline" packed the church hall the other night. It included a cabaret scene with an apache act that would have been severely criticized by a former generation had it been put on by professionals at a regular vaudeville show.

The vicar, however, never turned a hair—and, indeed, except by the false standards of Victorian prudery, it was all very harmless—but he avoided religious preliminaries.

THE Sunday school entertainment is only the beginning of the season's delights—the lowest stratum of amateur offerings.

Over at the grammar school we are more ambitious. The grammar school, which, as a wall tablet states, was "founded by Royal Charter of Philip and Mary, 1555," is no longer the austere institution it was when boys, and boys only, were taught Latin and Greek there.

It has become the equivalent of the Canadian high school. Girls now attend it and, like the boys, learn all sorts of things never dreamed of by the Tudor queen and her Spanish spouse.

In nothing is it more modern than its choice of its annual play. Last year we had "Yellow Sands," this year Shaw's "Arms and the Man."

But the boys and girls never act together, as in "Yellow Sands" boys took women's parts, a little chap of fourteen playing the role of an old woman, while in "Arms and the Man," girls swaggered about in military uniforms.

Let it be said here, however, that the boys proved themselves better "actresses" than the girls "actors."

WITH such a wealth of adolescent talent available the multitudinous amateur dramatic and operatic companies of Riverton never lack members. The rivalry is tremendous. If the Methodists put on a three-act comedy (what would the old deacons have thought of that?) the Catholics respond with a complete pantomime, while the Anglicans bid higher still with a comic opera.

The Anglican Operatic Society is the crown of things dramatic in Riverton. It begins its preparations six months ahead of the event. It engages the largest cinema in the town for a whole week and charges no less than seventy-five cents for the best seats. It hires its costumes in Manchester and brings an expert down from London to attend to the niceties of make-up.

But it is no aristocratic organization. Lancashire is democratic to the core and with the Anglican Operatic Society, as with all such bodies, talent is all that counts.

Wealthy members of the cast may drive up in their "posh" cars glad to take the minor parts, while a mill-girl is leading lady in "The Mikado," or the young fellow at the drug store has the title role in "Tom Jones."

Riverton is but typical of any number of small factory towns in respect of its devotion to amateur entertainments of all sorts. Wherefore Lancashire has become a favorite recruiting ground for the professional stage. London managers looking for new "turns" are frequent visitors. Gracie Fields is the most eminent of recent acquisitions from the county but the Lancashire accent is heard in every variety theatre in England. Monologuists and comic singers seem quite unable to get on without it.

A MANCHESTER daily paper has begun a controversy that is likely to have repercussions in Canada. It prints on its editorial page an article entitled "Canadians shy at Englishmen."

"The Englishman is decidedly unpopular in Canada," writes the unknown author, who says he has proved this personally in the course of a ten-year stay in the Dominion. "The Canadian finds his personality irksome, his presence irritating.

"The big thing which galls the Canadian is the Englishman's insularity, his inability to leave England behind him. He considers him slow, stubborn, argumentative, fussy, a grumbler, unadaptable, and awkward in picking up new ideas. . . .

"He (the Englishman) is inclined to deliberate to the point of fussiness. He does his job with traditional Old Country thoroughness, but very, very slowly—a drawback in a country where speed is the standard of judgment. . . .

"The Canadian takes more kindly to the canny Scot who listens quietly, says 'Och aye' and tackles the job as best he can. The Canadian observes that he is trying, willing to adapt himself and use advice, so he encourages him."

SINGULARLY enough, it is a Scotsman who "takes up the cudgels on behalf of the Englishman in Canada."

"I, too, have lived in Canada, and have worked in railroad and all kinds of bush camps, and I think your contributor paints a very exaggerated picture of the alleged hostility towards Englishmen," he says.

"On any jobs on which I worked I always found Englishmen preponderating, and they were always a decent crowd. The Canadian certainly rushes a job and the result is poor workmanship, and it is no wonder that the skilled English craftsman sometimes finds it difficult to 'larn' them."

MY OWN impression, gained in the course of a residence in Canada of more than forty years, is that Englishmen got on as well as other people there.

That some of them made themselves unpopular in the west in pre-war days cannot be denied. They were of that type that makes the Englishman unpopular on the continent of Europe.

In Canada they were mostly remittance-men, who, shipped off there because their people could do nothing with them in England idled their time away, subsisting on small pittances received from home, thus making themselves obnoxious to the small, hardworking communities they favored with their presence.

But they disappeared when the war broke out—mostly into the trenches in France—and much less has since been heard in Canada of the unpopularity of Englishmen, at least so far as my experience goes.

THE arguments of the advocates of sterilization of the mentally defective have had very strong support in a case lately mentioned to the poor law committee of a Lancashire district.

It had been found that two mentally defective parents, the man over 50 and the wife over 40, had had 17 children, most of whom were also mentally defective.

Four of these children had died in infancy. Two were certified as imbeciles. Three mental defectives were in institutions. Two had been certified as mentally defective. One was at school but was of low mentality. Two, aged eight and nine respectively, had never attended school. On only two were there favorable reports.

Presumably care will be taken to keep the five who are in institutions segregated but there is nothing in the law to prevent the others reproducing their kind.

Other cases of married mental defectives were adduced, one such couple, it was said, being jeered at in the streets. This pair had appeared before the registrar but he had no power to refuse to marry them. The union resulted in the birth of several children of low mentality who had become public charges.

There was always, too, the possibility of mental defectives escaping from institutions and becoming parents. This had happened several times, it was added.

IT IS an appalling fact that while mental defectives are multiplying themselves in this fashion, the birth-rate of normal families is steadily declining.

Some startling figures have been assembled in this connection by Aldous Huxley according to whom this is the last year throughout which the population of Great Britain will increase, the maximum being reached some time in 1936, with 45,145,000.

Five years later, he says, the figures will be down to 44,800,000, the population in 1931.

In that year, he points out, there were about 11,000,000 children under 15. In 1941, if present trends continue, there will be 8,750,000 of that age, and in 1976 only 4,000,000.

In 1900 there were seven times as many boys and girls under 15 as there were men and women over 65. In 1975, he calculates, there will be six old-age pensioners for every four children.

Space does not permit me to follow Mr. Huxley into the social and other consequences of this approaching reversal of the trend of population, but it may be remarked that it is common to all western Europe and to all America north of the Rio Grande.

On the other hand, during the next forty years, while Western Europe is losing 50,000,000 of population, Eastern Europe and Asia will increase theirs by at least 100,000,000.

And what then? Well, Mr. Huxley hopes that long before this stage is reached more perambulators will be in use west of the U.S.S.R.

AT this time of writing it does not look as if there would be any more Irish pacts for the present.

Mr. De Valera has abated none of his hostility to England and it was nothing short of sheer necessity that drove him to make the coal-cattle deal.

He had been negotiating with Germany but, under the terms of the agreement concluded between Great Britain and continental coal producers, supplies were not available there.

The choice then lay between British coal and American coal, the latter more expensive and not so good, with the added difficulty that the United States was not in any need of Irish cattle.

The political questions between the two governments stand exactly where they were. The Free State, it has been announced, has not even taken off the duty on British coal imposed as a retaliatory measure, nor is there any official announcement that Irish cattle are to come into Great Britain free.

What, however, the quarrel over the Irish land payments has cost both countries may be estimated from the fact that the coal-cattle agreement will provide work for 5,000 men in the collieries of South Wales, Lancashire and West Scotland and for 500 more at the Birkenhead lairages on the Mersey, while the Irish Free State will regain a large part of the $35,000,000 lost in British trade owing to the reduction of the quotas for importations of Irish cattle.

EMPRESS HAS SNAPPY REVUE

Elaborate new spectacles of beauty, rhythm and romance feature the screen's big musical comedy, "The Gay Divorcee," which comes to the Empress theatre on Monday for a run of three days and which co-stars Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire of "Carioca" fame, features music by five noted melody makers, and develops a joyous plot that tickled New York for 288 performances, and London for six months.

Fred Astaire

A second and even more laughable romance is provided by Alice Brady and Edward Everett Horton, in which the inimitable Miss Brady pursues Horton with marital designs.

Ginger Rogers

Against this remarkable setting for "The Gay Divorcee" fifty beautiful girls and fifty dancing men perform mass Terpsichorean novelties said to be entirely different from anything hitherto attempted on the screen.

Of the no less than four smart specialty dances, one at least, "The Continental," will challenge the remarkable popularity of the "Carioca," last season's Astaire and Rogers demonstration. Dave Gould staged both the "Carioca" and "The Continental."

Leading Lady Of Screen At Capitol Today

Listen Inn

A new and ambitious show bows into the ether Monday and music lovers will spin their dials to KOA or any other NBC red network outlet at 7:30 p.m., for the script of the new hour is over the signature of Otto Harbach, one of the most distinguished names ever to grace the kilocycles. Librettist of 51 operettas, Harbach has worked with Kern, Romberg, Hammerstein, Gershwin, Friml, Mandel and others, and has the successes, "Three Twins," "The Firefly," "Katinka," "High Jinks," "No, No Nannette," "Rose Marie" and the "Desert Song" to his credit. His latest contribution to musicomedy was "Roberta" which presented the smash song sensation of 1934 "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes."

It will be Harbach's first venture in radio and into the scripts he will weave many of his own experiences of playmaking along Broadway. Each week a variety of music is to be presented—bits of opera, popular music, orchestra work, chorus singing, but in every case the music will be a legitimate part of the story . . . it will never be dragged in.

Ray Noble, the only British maestro to have a steady parade of dance hits register on this side of the water, is finally to get an American radio hearing. Brought to New York from London last year by NBC, Noble was kept off the air by the Musicians' Union, so Ray went Hollywood, arranged music for one of the bigger studios, made the grade in pictures and proved so popular that the Union decided to drop the bars. His dansapation will be heard over an NBC-WEAF web early in February.

After hearing Mel Hammil, the Macdonald maestro air the new English tango hit, "Isle of Capri," over a local station from the Tivoli last Tuesday night, Horace Stovin, CRC official visiting this city for auditions, passed the word along that Mel's "Music in the Modern Manner" will be carried over the western network again on Saturday nights early in March.

Late to bat, but with a very nice selection, Richard Himber, who waves the baton when the Champions Orchestra and Joey Nash occupy the CBS kilocycles every Saturday at 9 p.m., names "Stormy Weather," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," "A Thousand Goodnights," "Cocktails for Two" and "Love in Bloom" as the outstanding five of 1934's parade of song successes.

Chain Chatter . . . CBS raided the talent of NBC to get the names of Eddie Cantor, the Baron Munchausen and Cliff "Sharlie" Hall with Fred Martin's orchestra, on the dotted line for weekly shows over its web, early in February . . . Horace Heidt, his Californians and a 40 voice choir are slated for a sponsored CBS hour in three weeks. . . . Bernice Claire, the noted stage star, will be guest artist with Isham Jones, when the, "Daddy of Dance Tunes," brings his band to CBS listeners Tuesday night at 7:30.

The weekly song tabulations of the networks and the Composers-Authors-Publishers-Association, tagged, "Dancing With My Shadow," the big hit of the past seven days, and following in order of popularity, were, "Blue Moon," "Where There's Smoke There's Fire," "The Isle of Capril," "You're the Top," "Because of Once Upon a Time," "Believe it Beloved," "I'll Follow My Secret Heart" and "Winter Wonderland."

SUPER FILM PLAYING AT RIALTO NOW

"Broadway Bill" Stars Myrna Loy and Warner Baxter

The amazing Frank Capra, director of "Lady For a Day," and "It Happened One Night," has undoubtedly surpassed all his former glories in his newest comedy sensation, "Broadway Bill," which made its debut last night at the Rialto Theatre.

With uncanny genius, the inimitable Mr. Capra has produced a beautifully human and appealing screen romance that is sheer delight. Based on a story by Mark Hellinger and written for the screen by the same Robert Riskin who collaborated with Capra on his two previous successes, "Broadway Bill" sets a standard in screen entertainment that will not easily be reached.

No little of the film's superb qualities can be attributed to the splendid performances registered by Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy in the two starring roles. Baxter's "Dan Brooks" is his finest screen characterization since the Cisco Kid in "In Old Arizona." Myrna Loy is a delightful revelation, a new and greater screen personality. Together as a romantic team, both Baxter and Loy are near perfect.

One of the thrilling sequences of the story is a horse race which, it may be honestly said, has not been equalled on the screen.

Baxter and Miss Loy, as said before, are excellent. Other fine performances are turned in by Connolly as the father, Helen Vinson as the selfish wife, Clarence Muse as Whitey, Raymond Walburn as a conniving bogus "Colonel," Lynne Overman as "Happy" and Margaret Hamilton as Edna, a boarding-housekeeper, familiarly known as "Vinegar Puss." Others seen in the picture, all of whom acquit themselves well are Frankie Darro, George Cooper, Douglas Dumbrille, Charles Levison, Ward Bond, Harry Todd, Paul Harvey, Charles Wilson and Edmund Breeze.

"Broadway Bill" will live in screen history!

Great Star Duo Screen Rialto Now

Myrna Loy and Warner Baxter, (insert), make motion picture history in the new film "Broadway Bill," said to be even heartier entertainment than the now famous "Thin Man." The new picture has a week's booking at the Rialto theatre.

Franchot Tone utilizes his deep baritone singing voice for the first time in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," with a rendition of a few bars of an Irish folk song.

INTIMATE GLIMPSES AND INSIDE STUFF ON THE MOVIE COLONY

By DAN THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 26.—The old circus formula brought to the screen.

That is the best way I can describe "The Mighty Barnum," which brings forth Wallace Beery as the outstanding figure in circus history, P. T. Barnum.

And in making the picture, Producer Darryl Zanuck followed the same system used by the circus king in amassing his fortune. Certainly nobody ever accused a circus of being artistic. But it is entertaining.

The same may be said of "The Mighty Barnum." I doubt if it will be numbered among the 10 best pictures of 1934. But I do think it will be among the 10 big money makers of the coming year.

However, a disappointment is in store for those who expect a film based on the life of Barnum to be a circus story. The big tent doesn't figure in this production at all.

Rather, the story deals with Barnum's early struggles, his American Museum in New York and his sponsorship of Jenny Lind during her first tour of this country.

Only in the closing scene is birth given to the circus idea, although a number of the circus freaks are on display in the museum.

To me this film is important for more than just its entertainment value. A couple of months ago Zanuck announced that he will spend $6,000,000 on 10 productions during the coming year.

If this is indicative of what is to come, then we are certain to get 10 films which will do much toward dragging the film industry out of its rut.

CONVINCING EVIDENCE

The other day Tully Marshall's agent rushed excitedly into a studio casting office, exclaiming that Marshall was just the man for a particular role the studio was trying to cast. Suppressing a yawn, a newcomer in the office asked, "And what has Tully Marshall ever done?"

That was too much for the agent. The next morning every studio casting director in Hollywood received a 17 by 24-inch poster bearing Marshall's record of 163 stage plays and 102 films.

MUSIC REVUE OPENS STRAND

What is undoubtedly the greatest of all musical spectacles, "Sweet Adeline," opened for the first time locally at the Strand theatre today.

Irene Dunne

There is no mystery as to how Warner Bros., already famous for their remarkable musicals, surpassed their previous efforts. They took a clever operetta with the reputation of a 63-week run on Broadway and gave it the kind of production treatment possible only to the Warner Bros. organization, provided as its star the charming Irene Dunne, gave her a cast which included four of the funniest comedians in films, and added to it the directing genius of Marvyn LeRoy and Bobby Connolly, master of dance spectacles.

The result was an evening of perfect entertainment.

The screen version retains the best of the original to which has been added much that is new and better, including two songs written particularly for this production by Jerome Kern, who, with Oscar Hammerstein II, wrote the operetta.

The story is laid in the gay nineties, and concerns the proprietor of a Hoboken beer garden and his daughters, who not only wait on tables but sing for the customers.

HEPBURN IS STAR TODAY AT CAPITOL

Large Cast of Notable Featured Players Backs Katie in "Little Minister"

Starring the brilliant Katharine Hepburn, Sir James M. Barrie's much-loved romance "The Little Minister" comes to the talking picture screen, as a vibrant, actionful and deeply moving romance. It opened at the Capitol theatre today and will be shown for three days only.

Never before has Miss Hepburn been afforded as colorful and dynamic a role as that of Babbie in "The Little Minister." The dashing, romantic gypsy girl, long enshrined in the hearts of the world, is perfect human material for the rich talents of the star of "Morning Glory," "Spitfire" and the unforgetable "Little Women" of a year ago.

Upon this talking picture re-creation of the romance of the lady masquerading as a Gypsy maid, and the shy Scotch clergyman, RKO-Radio has lavished all its artistic and technical riches.

John Beal, one of the finest of Hollywood's younger actors, is seen as Gavin Dishart, the little dominie whom Babbie loves. Alan Hale is the temperamental ruffian Rob Dow. The talented Frank Conray plays Lord Rintoul, her guardian. Other notable and popular figures in Miss Hepburn's supporting cast are Donald Crisp, Lumsden Hare, Andy Clyde, Billy Watson, Beryl Mercer, Dorothy Stickney, Mary Gordon, Elly Malyon, Reginald Denny, Leonard Carey, Herbert Bunston, Harry Beresford and Barlowe Borland.

In addition to its lovely romance, "The Little Minister" is filled with entertaining action of the sort that is the life-blood of the motion picture. The loves and hates, jealousies and humors of the little Scotch village are woven into the love story, and form a moving, many-colored background to the highlights of the tale.

Joe Penner At Dreamland Now

Reversing the usual procedure, Joe Penner, radio and screen star, featured in "College Rhythm," coming Monday to the Dreamland theatre, stood in for his stand-in. And as a result he went home with a lame back and a cold.

A scene of "College Rhythm" called for Joe to leap into a small lake after his pet duck, Goo-Goo. In work like that, stand-ins usually double for the players in the long shots, and so Freddy Welch, Penner's stand-in, peeled off his coat and prepared to take the plunge. Joe Penner saw him look ruefully at his trousers.

"Nice pants," said Joe.

"Yeah," said Freddy. "Just bought 'em yesterday. Too bad."

"Too bad nothing," said his big-hearted boss. "I'll dive in myself. Might as well. I'll have to do it for the close-ups anyway. And these pants are old."

In he went. He dove in and came out five times before a "take" proved satisfactory. Between times he stood about in his wet clothes.

Result: A severe cold in the back.

Kitty Carlisle, featured with Bing Crosby in "Here Is My Heart" has not gone to a Hollywood party or night club since coming to the film city.

Harold Lloyd Princess Star

Harold Lloyd's latest comedy, "The Cat's Paw," produced from Clarence Budington Welland's Saturday Evening Post serial of the same name, and now playing at the Princess theatre, reunites the comedian with Sam Taylor, director, after a separation of seven years.

Taylor, who started in the motion picture business as a gag man in the days of the comedian's earliest successes, "Sailor Made Man" and "Grandma's Boy," directed some of Lloyd's foremost silent triumphs. Among these was "The Freshman," still rated as one of the greatest comedies ever brought to the screen. Taylor, meanwhile, has directed a number of the biggest names in pictures, including Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks.

Fourteen Deaths In Snow Slides Coast Province

VANCOUVER, Jan. 26.—Fourteen deaths directly attributed to slides were listed last night as British Columbia continued to battle its way out of tons of snow and developing flood conditions. Three other deaths were indirectly reported due to the storm.

Snow and rain, bringing scores of snowslides in their wake and disrupting telegraph and train communication, was abating, but from many points came reports of hardship and death. Cessation of rain and snow brought hope flood conditions would not be as serious as first feared. Slides were still threatening throughout interior sections.

SNOWSLIDE VICTIMS

Frank Lind, Lionel Morris and John Mucha were killed in a snowslide at Paulson, 63 miles west of Nelson, while cleaning a Canadian Pacific railway right of way. George Boyd, foreman of a gang, and two other unidentified men were killed at Clan William, according to meagre reports.

A railway section foreman named Hucula was killed in a slide five miles west of Golden but details were unavailable.

A five-year-old boy was killed at Sumas when a slide destroyed ten houses. Another small slide at Sumas killed a 15-year-old boy. Percy Barnes, British Columbia Electric company motorman, died from exposure when his interurban car was stalled in drifts at Sardis, in the Fraser valley.

WOMAN FREEZES

Walter Ross was buried under tons of snow near Orden, in the Bridge river valley. During the early part of the week, George Michell was killed at Chilliwack in a slide; Mrs. Gage Moody, an Indian woman, froze to death in a boat near Vancouver and George Phersen succumbed to freezing in another boat near Vancouver.

Tommy Robertson, former Cumberland soccer player, was killed when he slipped on ice on Vancouver Island to make the third death indirectly attributed to storm conditions. Previously George Fennell, Chuchua postmaster, was killed in explosion of a jacket heater, and an aged woman died from burns resulting from fire in her house.

TEMPERATURES HIGHER

Devastation increased with higher temperatures. Snow melted and covered low-lying farm lands with water two feet deep. Farmers and rescue workers in the Fraser river and Kettle Valley regions encountered extreme difficulties in flood waters.

Farmers moved about in rowboats. One police officer, in the south Westminster lowlands, patrolled his beat in a small boat. Towns and villages behind roads blocked with 18 feet of snow reported supplies dangerously low.

TRAINS RESUME

A brave attempt at resumption of train service in the Kettle Valley area between Lethbridge, in Alberta, and Penticton, was reported underway. All slides were cleared in this district.

A Canadian Pacific westbound passenger train which has been held at Glacier for the past four days will return to Calgary tonight. Coast passengers will be transferred to a Kettle River Valley train for Kingsgate, B.C., on the international border. There they will board a train for Spokane and Seattle and then travel by boat to Vancouver.

There was an export in December of 346,600 dozen Canadian eggs of the value of $82,110. This was below the export of a year ago.

PARLIAMENT DAY-TO-DAY

Yesterday in Parliament.

The Senate did not sit.

The House of Commons: Gave first reading to a bill to consolidate and revise the Patent Law.

Gave second reading to bills amending the Interpretation Act, the Criminal Code and the Representation Act.

Debated a motion ot inaugurate a national health policy.

Permitted C. H. Dickie (Cons., Nanaimo) to withdraw his motion urging a national flag.

NEW GEMS IN JUBILEE DIADEM

LONDON, Jan. 26—Pure gold from Canada and Australia, platinum from New Zealand, diamonds from South Africa, and jewels from other parts of the British Empire may enrich the already dazzling imperial crown for the Empire Jubilee, according to London Daily Express.

It is proposed to recreate a genuinely representative imperial crown to be worn by the king for the forthcoming jubilee ceremonies, with new stones from many parts of the empire in the glittering diadem.

The present crown contains five rubies, 11 emeralds, 17 sapphires, 277 pearls, 2,783 diamonds. In addition to gold, platinum and diamonds suggested for further ornamentation of the crown, the proposal is that emeralds, sapphires and diamonds from India, rubies from Burma and beryl from Ceylon, be added to the crown.

Sino-American Air Service In Near Future

SHANGHAI, Jan. 26.—The Ministry of Communications of the National Government issued a statement today saying a Sino-American trans-Pacific airmail service would be inaugurated the middle of April.

Planes will start from San Francisco and Los Angeles, the statement said, and fly via Hawaii, Manila and Canton, where they will link with the China National Aviation Corporation service.

Third Fire Victim

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Jan. 26.—The death-dealing farm house fire at Narrows Lock last week, Friday counted its third victim. Mrs. John Rogers, 82, sole survivor of the blaze, died at the home of Samuel McCann nearby, Thursday night.

—Peter's Denial—

Illustrated Sunday School Lesson

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell and Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Mark 14:12-72

In the upper room about the Lord's Table, Jesus plainly foretold His disciples would all forsake Him. Simon Peter was especially warned that Satan would tempt him severely and that before morning he would deny Christ thrice.

In the Garden of Gethsemane, Peter with James and John were especially asked to watch with Jesus as He prayed, "Watch and pray that we enter not into temptation. The spirit indeed is willing but the flesh is weak," He said.

Copyright, 1935, by Central Press Association, Inc.

Upon Jesus' arrest "Peter followed Him afar off." At the trial of Jesus he sat and warmed himself at the fire with Jesus' opponents and when charged with being His disciple he denied it with curses and oaths.

When Peter made his third denial the cock crowed the second time and Jesus turned and looked at Peter. This reminded him of Jesus' words of warning and Peter went out and wept bitterly for his sin of denying his Lord.

(GOLDEN TEXT—I Cor. 10-12)

BIG ADVANCE IS REPORTED AT CENTRAL

Excellent progress was made at Central United Church during the past year, according to reports presented to the annual meeting of the congregation held recently.

Robert McCreath, submitting the sessional report, showed that the net membership of the church now stood at 660. This was an increase of 22 over the total for the preceeding year.

John Howey, chairman of the board of stewards, reported improved financial standing with practically all obligations met and increased contributions in some departments.

For all purposes, about $10,000 was raised during the year, of which $3,099 was for various missionary objects. Envelope givings totalled $6,368.

Student enrollment of 315 was shown in the Sunday school report, with a teaching force of 35. Six boys' groups and active C.G.I.T. groups were reported.

Elections to the board of elders were as follows: R. K. Colter, Thomas Ewart, A. D. Youmans and George B. Laverty; and to the board of stewards: W. Gardiner, J. C. Moodie, T. J. Ashbaugh, William Brown, D. McDearmid, Harold Banks, Mrs. J. Philpot and a representative of the women's association to be appointed.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Truth" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at the local Christian Science Church and at all Christian Science Churches tomorrow. Among the citations from the Bible is James 1:17: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, is as follows (page 227): "Christian Science raises the standard of liberty and cries: 'Follow me! Escape from the bondage of sickness, sin and death!' Jesus marked out the way. Citizens of the world, accept the glorious liberty of the children of God, and be free! This is your divine right."

ST. MARKS HAS EXCELLENT YEAR

The annual congregational meeting of St. Mark's church was held in the parish hall on Thursday, January 17 at 8 p.m., the Rev. C. Storey presiding. The meeting was well attended.

The reports of the various organizations were read and in all cases showed great improvement over the previous year and the co-operation received in each instance was certainly encouraging, since the year has been exceedingly difficult and many obstacles had to be overcome.

A vote of thanks was extended to all parishiners and retiring members of the vestry for their help and support during the past year.

The following were elected for the ensuing year: Vicar's warden, H. Bromley; people's warden, Mr. Holmes; vestry, Mr. Witcherly, Mrs. Stretton, Mr. F. Hayden, Mr. A. Davy, Mr. Ayling, Mr. Fred Williams, Mr. H. Hayden, Mr. J. Bladon, Miss Lawrence; secertary treasurer, Miss Winnifred Robinson; lay-delegates to synod, Mr. Bromley and Mr. Turner; substitutes, Mr. Davy and Mr. Ayling.

MAJOR AND MINOR NOTES

Music lovers are still echoing the praises of Jose Iturbi, dapper Spanish pianist, who thrilled the audience at McDougall auditorium on Wednesday evening with a scintillating display of piano playing. His performance reached great heights and most assuredly will be a high spot in the year's musical activities.

Attention now turns to the coming of Grete Stueckgold, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Association, New York, who is to appear next month at McDougall auditorium under the auspices of the Women's Musical Club, being the third of the series of celebrity concerts being sponsored by the club this season. Her visit is being anticipated with the greatest of pleasure, as she is already a familiar favorite with local audiences by reason of her recent radio appearances.

Memories are still fresh of her appearance in the concert version of Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice," accompanied by the New York Philharmonic, under Bruno Walter. She appeared in a series of radio programs in the fall and last Sunday was soloist with the Detroit Symphony under Victor Kolar. Whether in the lighter ballads, in the more extended operetta arias, or in grand opera or lieder, she is a rare artist and is certain of a warm welcome when she comes here three weeks hence.

Edmonton musicians who go elsewhere usually make good. Miss D. D. Wright of King Edward Park appeared in a recital in Washington on December 5, and a clipping from the Washington Post just to hand speaks most enthusiastically about her work. She appeared in a recital as both accompanist and piano soloist. One remark of the critic of the concert suffices to show the excellence of Miss Wright's work. He states that "one would like as well to hear further from Miss Wright, who made the infirmities of the piano yield to her poetic reading of the Brahms' 'Rhapsody.'"

Heavy snow and other storms which disrupted traffic of all kinds between the Pacific coast and the rest of the country proved to be a boon to this city's radio artists. On Tuesday evening last, when the tie-up was at its worst, no fewer than four Canadian Radio Commission programs originated here instead of the one, "Sous Bois," which is on the national net-work every Tuesday. The other three were pinch-hitting for Vancouver programs which did not go on the air because they could not be transmitted. They were "Jimmy, Chet and Russ," vocalists par excellence; Queenie Jackson Bouvette, and the Four Gypsies. On Wednesday night, to fill another spot left vacant by Vancouver, Mel Hammill's Revellers filled a 15-minute spot.

Horace Stovin, western regional director for the C.R.C., who has been in the city for several days, has auditioned many potential radio artists. He reports himself highly pleased with several and the network may be treated to their art in the near future. Mr. Stovin expects to leave for Calgary over the week-end.

Taxpayers' Meeting Now Postponed

The meeting of the Taxpayers' Association, which, according to previous announcements was to have been held on January 30, has been postponed, according to a statement made by officials today. The future date of the meeting will be announced later, it was stated.

ALWAYS ENCLOSE A STAMPED ADDRESSED ENVELOPE!

Address all correspondence to: The Director, Stamp Collectors' Club, The Bulletin, Edmonton, Alberta.

For some years The Bulletin has made possible guidance in the hobby by an internationally known philatelic expert, who is at your service to advise regarding your problems.

YOU are welcome in membership. State your age, size of collection and what stamps are of special interest to you. Enclose postage for reply always. You will receive a membership card and some stamps for your collection.

EXCHANGE: Send 50 different stamps to the Club Director and you will help our new members in starting a collection. Send no "junk." Used stamps must be soaked free of all gum and paper and all must be good sound specimens. Used copies of Canadian stamps, excepting current, ordinary type 1, 2 and 3c denominations may be sent. Remember to enclose a stamped envelope for reply.

CANADIAN REVENUES

Many members have recently enquired as to whether revenue stamps are rightly placed with Canadian postage stamps in the album. The purpose for which they are issued is entirely different from that of postage stamps and they should either be placed in a separate section of the album or a different album should rightly be used for them.

The collector who has well filled in Canadian postal issues will find an interesting field of study in the beautiful revenue issues of the provinces and the Dominion, which number well over a thousand varieties. There are a number of them that are rarities and worth considerable but the majority of them may be obtained for a small fraction of the price set in the revenue catalogues. As comparatively few collectors have realized the interest in this group of stamps, there is little demand for them and packets may be purchased for as low as one-twentieth catalogue. As in postage stamps, age means little. Rarity is the gauge of value.

A number of types are illustrated today and, in addition, are the various Law Stamps of the provinces. Postage stamps that have been used fiscally as well as the excise and war tax stamps belong in this group. These latter should not be confused with the postal war tax stamps (three types), which are regular postage stamps. Cigarette, tobacco, cigar and snuff stamps as well as stock exchange transfer stamps, luxury tax, gasoline stamps, etc., from some of the provinces, belong in this group. The various Telegraph and Telephone "Franks" should be collected as well, to make completeness.

The various varieties, errors, etc., of the Law Stamps of Canada are an interesting group in themselves and a separate album may well be used to house them. Those formerly in use in Alberta are now obsolete and many of the early issue, which were printed by The Bulletin, are scarce.

Ask your dealer for a job lot to make a start with this interesting group.

V. A. PORTER NAMED CHAIRMAN OF HOSPITAL BOARD

Annual Reports Reflect Work of Successful Year

All Branches of Institution Praised for Efficient Co-Operation — New Officers Named.

Harmony and co-operation reigned at the first meeting of the Edmonton Hospital Board for 1935, held in the Royal Alexandra Hospital on Friday night, when new members were introduced, a new slate of officers and new committees elected, and a large number of annual reports bristling with statistics were read out by various persons.

Members handed each other verbal bouquets with abandon as they praised various departments, the staffs, executives, retiring officials and everyone down from Superintendent, Dr. A. F. Anderson, to the newest undergraduate nurse, for the good showing of all sections of the hospital during the past year.

PORTER IS CHAIRMAN

V. A. Porter, well-known local business man, was elected chairman in succession to Alfred Farmilo, E. E. Owen, who retired from the nomination for chairman to make it unanimous, was elected vice-chairman, and J. A. Montgomery was re-elected secretary.

A new appointment to the board was Robert Le Maitre, while old-timers re-appointed to the board are E. T. Love, E. E. Howard, E. E. Owen, E. S. Thompson and Mr. Porter.

The following were appointed members of the nominations committee: J. G. Suss, Mrs. W. A. Wilson, Sid "Fighting" Parsons. Their recommendations for members of executive, finance and building and lands committees were accepted in full by the board, and are as follows:

Executive: Mr. Farmilo, Mr. Love, Alderman J. T. McCreath and Mrs. I. Ringwood.

Finance: Mr. Suss, Lloyd E. Wood, Mr. Howard and E. S. Thompson.

SHELVE ESTIMATES

On account of the voluminous annual reports facing the meeting, it was decided to defer to a special meeting consideration of the annual estimates for 1935.

Meanwhile, Mr. Farmilo put through a motion that salary sche-

PRINCIPAL OF DEBT CUT BY REVIEW BOARD

Decision Rendered by the Court in Case of Brightview Farmer

Principal owing to the Soldier Settlement Board on the purchase price of a quarter section farm was cut from $5,376 to $3,500 by the Board of Review appointed under the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement act in the case of a Brightview farmer in a proposal formulated Saturday morning.

The Board order that only interest be paid under the proposal for the years 1935 to 1937 inclusive, and one-tenth of the principal and interest from 1938 to 1947 inclusive.

A mortgage company's claim for $5,076 was reduced to $4,700 carrying interest at seven per cent in the case of a Millet farmer. In this case repayment is to be made in ten equal instalments starting in 1939, only interest to be paid in 1936 to 1938 inclusive. No payment is ordered in 1935.

In the case of a Sunnybrook farmer a claim of the C. P. R. on an agreement of sale was set at $2,893 with interest at six per cent. This is the interest rate charged by the company on the original agreement. Repayment of this claim is to be made in ten annual instalments commencing in 1938, interest only to be paid in 1935 to 1937 inclusive.

The board ordered a scaling down of 25 per cent in the amount owing to all unsecured creditors, payment to be made in three annual instalments, no interest to be charged on the accounts.

Radio License Figures Jump For Edmonton

Radio receiving licenses issued in Edmonton for the period April 1 to December 31, 1934, totalled 12,796 as compared to 11,345 for the whole of the preceding fiscal year (April 1, 1933, to March 31, 1934), according to figures released by W. Allen, radio inspector with the department of marine here. Corresponding figures for Calgary are 11,089 and 9,748.

For the nine-month period under survey 46,506 licenses were taken out in Alberta, as compared to 39,308 for Saskatchewan, 51,238 for Manitoba and 67,715 for British Columbia.

License figures for other cities in Alberta for the nine months follow: Camrose, 311; Drumheller, 437; Lethbridge, 1,427; Medicine Hat, 1,422; Red Deer, 424; Wetaskiwin, 405.

Final Rites Held For J. P. Johnson

Attended by members of the family, relatives from New Norway and a large number of friends, the funeral of J. P. Johnson, former Swedish vice-consul for Alberta, was held Friday afternoon.

Mr. Johnson, for many years a well-known businessman of Wetaskiwin and latterly resident of Edmonton, died Wednesday after a lengthy illness.

The service was held at Howard and McBride's private chapel, Rev. George A. MacDonald officiating and interment took place in Edmonton cemetery. Many floral tributes were received.

NEW DANCING ACADEMY OPENS

Extensively redecorated the dance academy formerly known as the Club Academy in the La Fleche building, will re-open tonight as the Watkins Dance Academy, Guy Watkins, noted as the leader of one of the most outstanding rhythm bands in the west has obtained a long lease on the hall and will personally manage it.

Two nights a week will be given over to public dances—Thursday and Saturday, while other nights will be available for private functions.

Mr. Watkins has surrounded himself with some of the classiest dance men in the west and with a plentiful supply of the latest dance orchestrations will be in a position to provide full programs of the latest and best in attractive music.

Chester Moffet Heads Aero Club

Chester E. Moffet was elected president of the Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero Club at the annual meeting in the Y.M.C.A., Friday.

Reports submitted on the year's activities showed the club to be making excellent progress as one of the leading organizations of its kind in Canada.

Other officers elected were: C. North Sawle, vice-president; Bert McCaw, second vice-president; James K. Potter, secretary-treasurer (re-elected); directors—C. Becker, Leonard Waagen, J. R. R. Ross, Sven Jensen, Edsel East, Frank Brown, J. Lewis.

Gleaned From Today's News

The Oliver Community League is holding a whist drive and bridge in Patricia hall, 116 street, Friday, Feb. 1, at 8 p.m.

The East Edmonton Federal Conservative Association will hold a meeting in Conservative headquarters, McLeod building, Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

A meeting of the executive of the West Edmonton Federal Conservative Association will be held in Conservative headquarters, McLeod building, Wednesday, January 30, at 8 o'clock.

Sponsored by the Independent Labor Party a 9 p.m. concert will be given at the Empire theatre on Sunday. To celebrate Bobbie Burns' anniversary the Scottish Pipe Band will be in attendance. Doors open at 8 p.m.

J. L. Palethorpe, Brandon, arrived in Edmonton Saturday morning to take charge of the Edmonton division during the period J. H. Chown, superintendent for the Canadian Pacific Railway here, is on sick leave.

E. D. Cotterell, district superintendent Canadian Pacific Railway, with headquarters in Calgary, is a business visitor in Edmonton calling on wholesalers and conferring with officials of the line.

Canadian Airways headquarters here reported Walter Gilbert out of Edmonton airport on Saturday morning, headed for McMurray air base, and Rudy Heuss and Archie McMullen are reported southbound from Cameron Bay. W. R. "Wop" May made a round trip to Fort Smith and back to Fort McMurray Friday.

BLANKET FUND NEEDS DONORS

With the constant and heart breaking struggle of trying to support a family of seven by means of a few odd dollars picked up here and there, a father's health finally broke down and it was found necessary to remove him to a city hospital where it would be possible for him to have medical attention.

The farm he had bought and had struggled so desperately to pay for is gone, as are the few material possessions the family owned.

The family is not eligible for relief in Edmonton, having come but recently to the city, and a return to the country is impossible as the father cannot have there, the medical care he requires.

The entire family is living in a small shack practically bare of even meagre necessities. For their food they are relying upon what little can be obtained by charity.

For people in such circumstances as these the Lieut.-Col. William Barker Chapter is asking support for its blanket fund. Donations are urgently needed and may be paid to any of the following central depots: Suss Meat Market, 9560 111 avenue; Allman's Confectionery, 10421 124 street; Cowle's Drug Store, 10349 Whyte avenue; University Tuck Shop; Johnson's Cafe, Jasper avenue and 101 street; King Edward Cafe, 101 street.

Burns Company Officials Here

After attending a western convention of the Burns company limited in Calgary, managers of the eastern points arrived in Edmonton this morning and will inspect the company's plant today.

Those included in the party are W. W. Reed, Montreal; R. B. Maynard, Toronto; N. T. Gardiner, Winnipeg; Rex Puttich, Regina and W. Williamson, Prince Albert.

A great improvement in western conditions had been noted, stated the eastern visitors, still further evidence of this being shown in the fact that the recently held Calgary convention was the first in four years that condtions had warranted.

Following their visit to this city the managers will travel east making an inspection of the plants at Prince Albert, Saskatoon, Regina and Winnipeg.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

"What do you think of the way the streets are being cleaned of snow this year, as compared with former years? The Bulletin's Inquiring Reporter asked, as he noted gangs of men toiling to make Edmonton's streets safe. The answers follow:

TOM SMITH, court orderly: "Well, say, they certainly got to give Joe Clarke credit for the way he keeps trying to beat the snow. We have had heavier snowfalls this year than we have had for quite a while, but the streets are being looked after better than ever."

PRESTY GIFFEN, Janitor Supply Company: "Yes, they are certainly making a real effort this winter to keep the Edmonton streets clear, and I am glad to be able to say so. It makes it a lot easier for delivery businesses even with all the snow we've had."

J. G. SUSS, business man: "Well, they sure have to do it—they got to do it, to keep ahead of the snow."

MAN HURT WHEN STRUCK BY CAR

William Anderson was removed to the Royal Alexandra Hospital Friday night following injuries received when he was struck and knocked down by a car while walking along 102 avenue near 127 street at 6:15 p.m.

Walter Huff, 11113 127 street, driver of the car which struck Anderson who resides at 9737 85 avenue, reported to police that he had seen the man walking in the centre of the roadway and had slowed down to avoid an accident. After stepping off the traffic lane at the sound of Huff's horn, Anderson is alleged to have stepped back at the last minute and was bowled over by the fender. His injuries are not serious.

Returning From Tour Of Soviet

Thos. E. Mountford, who has recently toured the Soviet Union under the auspices of the Trade Unions of that country, arrived in the city this morning on his way back to his home in Cranbrook, B.C.

Mr. Mountford is one of a group of Trade Union delegates representing various Canadian industries who were elected to go to the Soviet Union to gather first-hand information from the viewpoint of a Canadian, as to actual conditions in that country which is today such a prolific source of conflicting opinions.

The delegation, of which he was a member, travelled extensively, visiting different sections of the Soviet Union.

His findings will be placed before the Edmonton public on Sunday evening in the Gem theatre at a meeting at which Dr. F. Crang will officiate as chairman.

ROAD REPORT

No general report on the condition of the roads following last night's fall of snow has been available, stated officials at the Alberta Motor Association today. Roads east of Hardisty are blocked, while those west of that point are passable but heavy.

The Peace River highway is only open as far as Athabasca.

Edmonton Public School Board will meet in committee of the whole Tuesday at 8 p.m., in the board room, 510 Civic block.

Burns Day will be celebrated at the next weekly luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club to be held in the Macdonald hotel Monday noon. John McNeill will be chairman and a program of Scottish selections will be provided.

Col. J. C. Stewart, D.S.O., A.A. and Q.M.G., Calgary, gave an interesting talk to members of the Edmonton branch of the Alberta Military Institute in the Prince of Wales Armory Friday evening. The title of his subject was "The Role of the Artillery."

On an inspection tour which has included all the western stores of the Hudson's Bay Company, F. F. Martin, Winnipeg, general manager, arrived in Edmonton today from the west. Accompanying Mr. Martin is A. H. Lee, Winnipeg, superintendent of buildings for the Hudson's Bay Company who is making a general survey of the condition and maintainance of the western stores.

KING WINTER GETS SETBACK

Continuing the struggle to wrench itself from the relentless grip of King Winter, the gallant mercury continued its upward climb in the thermometer throughout Friday night and into this morning with the result that at 9 a.m. the temperature stood at zero, with a low for the night of three below.

The forecast is for partly cloudy weather with light snowfalls or flurries today and on Sunday with temperature remaining the same or a little higher.

During the last 24 hours six and one half inches of snow fell.

Several northern points still report extreme cold and generally the north is colder than on Friday.

The coldest point reporting was Fort Vermilion which, at 8:30 a.m. today experienced 35 below weather. Keg River was 25 below and Notikewin was nicked for 23 below.

Slave Lake reports 12 inches of new snow and Athabasca six inches with temperature of 10 below zero.

Bullets Enter City Residence

For the third time this week, a citizen reported to police Friday night that his residence has been made the target for rifle fire.

Henry Hollinger, of 15005 95 street complained that he heard the reports of the rifle at the rear of his house but at the time thought some boys were discharging firecrackers.

It was not until Friday morning that he learned the truth when he found one of the rear windows of the house shattered, a spent .22 bullet buried in the door jamb, and another lying on the floor of the back porch. Police are investigating.

Police Court

Paul S. Adamic, whose signature in 1929 was good for $50,000 and whose losses the past few years, coupled with a continuous misunderstanding with his wife, led him to rob the post office of $60, was given suspended sentence of two years on bond of $1,000 in police court Saturday morning.

"I am not impressed with your story," declared Magistrate Miller after Adamic had explained that he had kept monies for post office money orders which he collected on his mail route and used the funds to finance liquor and card losses, acting dishonestly when in a "stupor."

Justice was again tempered with mercy when Jack Penn, charged with contributing to the delinquency of his lover's 15-year-old daughter, was given suspended sentence on bond of $200 for one year. Penn, the court felt was the tool of husband and wife in obtaining ground for divorce.

Entering pleas of not guilty to charges of wilful damage to the Toronto rooming house, 96 street, and assault on its owner, Joe Smith, Emerick Bolanz was remanded into custody to Monday. He is alleged to have invaded the rooming house, broken furniture and stained the walls with blood. He was arrested when officers found him lashing with a knife at a door behind which Smith was hiding.

Celebrate Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary

MR. AND MRS. ANSON PELLERIM

Anson Pellerim Built First Log Cabin Near Banks Of Battle River

Natives of the province of Quebec and residents of this city for the last 24 years, Mr. and Mrs. Anson Pellerim, 215 Empress Block on Sunday will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary, a golden jubilee of marital bliss. Hale and hearty, both are looking forward to many more years together and in this city.

Both were born at Massawippi, Que., and now Mr. Pellerim has passed his 74th milestone and Mrs. Pellerim has passed her 72nd.

First of the two to feel the uncontrollable desire to come west was Mr. Pellerim, who came to Wetaskiwin in 1901 and accompanied by a large number of livestock shipped from Quebec to the Carbee ranch, situated seven miles from the town now known as Daysland.

He later built the first log cabin near Alliance on the Battle river. Mrs. Pellerim joined her husband in the west in 1913.

His experiences in the west include ranching, farming and prospecting and he also drove stock during the early days from Livingstone, Mont., to Kansas City, Miss. He was one of those who prospected in the Athabasca mining areas.

Mr. Pellerim first visited Edmonton in 1902 when he attended the annual fair which was held on grounds now known as Ross Flats.

Mickey Mouse Is Starred At "U" Dance

Despite the failure of Garbo, Gable and the Barrymores to put in an appearance at curtain time, the show went on last night at the University of Alberta undergraduate dance. Mickey Mouse starred.

With big ideas and sufficient funds for a night letter to Hollywood, one of the promoters of the dance sent an invitation to the movie city early in the week requesting the presence of such stars as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer authorities could spare for a few days. Everything toward an entertaining holiday was to be supplied except expense money, train fare and wages.

Hollywood authorities wired back that no stars would be available but that the invitation was appreciated. With the score tied at one telegram each, the movie city jumped momentarily into the lead when a telegram was received stating that officials had reconsidered and that the Misses Toby Wing and Mary Carlisle were on the way. Investigation proved the third telegram to be spurious and the campus slipped back to normalcy.

More to be pitied than censured, the student authorities called on Mickey Mouse to save the day and this the feline actor, in two reels, accomplished.

Theft of his new 1935 license plates, number 3-180, from his car parked on 102 street just north of Jasper avenue, between 7:30 and 10 p.m. Friday, was reported to police today by R. Carruthers, of 11929 66 street.

EXPECT BEST SEED FAIR IN CITY HISTORY

Will be Held From February 13 to 16 in H.B.C. Store

Expectations are that the seed fair to be held on the 5th floor of the Hudson's Bay Company building from Feb. 13-16 will far exceed all previous fairs, declared officials in charge on Saturday.

In addition to the showing of seed and a large number of entries, there will be in attendance, Prof. D. J. Harrison of the Board of Grain Commissioners, Winnipeg, and D. C. McCabe, outstanding seed authority.

There will be a complete program of matters appertaining to seeds, both by the provincial agricultural department and the University of Alberta.

Registered seed will be shown in large quantities while there will be also an exhibit of seed-cleaning equipment.

The junior seed clubs will be well represented by more than 100 delegates to whom a great impetus has been given by the winning of the world wheat championship by Jack Allsopp of Wembley.

Before attempting to adjust brakes, the pressure on all tires should be equal.

THE TIMID ONE

A Bulletin Short Story Complete on This Page Every Saturday.

By Frederick R. Bechdolt

Dan Brent Tried to Shield His Young Bride From the Dangers of the Untamed West, But He Knew Little About Women's Ways.

It happened that the Mescallero Apaches were off the reservation, which was not large news in itself; in fact, the Tres Cruces paper gave it a little less than two sticks; but it also happened that Dan Brent was bringing his young bride out to Arizona and they were passing through the country at the time. And this combination of incidents produced, in days to come, some queer results.

Women were scarce in the land beyond the Pecos then, but if they had been as plentiful as they are in this present era of civic centres, country clubs and lady Congressmen, Alice Brent would have attracted attention anywhere she went. It was not so much her beauty as it was a delicacy of coloring and features that seemed exotic in this harsh Southwest. Beside Dan on the seat of the buckboard, she suggested a blossom which is being carried away from a sheltered garden by the one who has plucked it. He was some years her elder, one of those silent, narrow-eyed men who remain unobtrusive until occasion demands that they assert themselves; and then their significance departs; a presence reveals itself which makes them seem gigantic.

The afternoon was well along; the mules were plodding through a soil like ashes; the dust was settling in a gray film over the buckboard and its two passengers. A brief range of ragged mountains showed ahead. Where one of its sharp peaks cut the sky a slender threat of smoke arose; it climbed straight upward in the windless air. Alice had been watching it for some time before she asked:

"What makes it change color that way, now white, now black?"

"Signal," Dan said. "It's the Apaches, sweet." He went on to tell her how they telegraphed from peak to peak, sometimes across a hundred miles; and added as an afterthought, "I reckon those Mescalleroes are on the warpath again."

He said it as he would mention any small phenomenon along the road, for to him it was as the dust and the cactus and the heat of the sun—part of the day's routine. She made no comment, but she drew a little closer to him and her eyes hung on the smoke.

Later they passed some graves, crosses of sun-bleached stones laid upon the arid earth. She did not ask him as to the meaning of these bleak little sepulchers, or how the buried men had come to their ends. Since she and Dan had left the uncompleted railroad, the country had been growing lonelier, more grim. The few travelers whom they encountered had been weighed down with weapons. And today, it seemed to her, all the landscape held forth the suggestion of violent death.

That night they made their camp beside a waterhole on the mountain's western flank. They were lying in their blankets beneath the snapping stars; the coarse tufts of grass were whispering in the evening breeze; the mules were making a comfortable sound, munching their grain; and Dan was just dropping off to sleep when he heard a sob. He felt his wife trembling. He drew her close to him and he lay, holding her in his arms, through the long hours, striving to comfort her. And, while he spoke low words of love and reassurance, he began to realize the thing which he had done.

He saw it all clearly; the little town between low green Eastern hills, with the three sharp steepled churches, and the red brick houses set back behind beds of sweet william and mignonette. He had taken her from that secure village, where life went on in peace and comfort; he was bringing her to a land where he who would live the day through must keep his loaded weapons always within reach. To him the dangers of the Arizona border, where his home ranch lay, were but incidents; he had grown to disregard their gravity while he was learning to cope with them. But to her——

A tender flower! And he had plucked her from a peaceful garden!

He made himself a promise then to shield her from all the ugly realities; to hide every danger from her. Henceforth it was his task to stand between her and the untamed West.

It was more than a week later when they saw the long valley flats reaching out between tall, treeless mountain ranges into the mysteries of mauve and ashes of roses and amethyst off to the southward, where Dan Brent had established his home ranch. Here, where the road twined among clumps of creosote and ragged cacti on the mesa they passed the old Morning Glory mine. Of its workings nothing remained save an empty shaft and a dump of country rock in whose crannies a few rattlesnakes and gila monsters found shelter from the flaming Arizona sun; but the one-room adobe house, in which the owners had stood off claim jumpers and Apaches in days gone by, was near enough to the international boundary to serve as an ideal rendezvous for venturesome wagon outfits from Tucson and the pack trains of the swarthy Chihuahua smugglers. This summer a man who went hereabouts by the name of Jerkline was holding it down.

As to this Jerkline, he was merely a dusty nondescript, but he had with him one whose character had impressed itself on every roaring young community from the Texas Cross Timbers to the Colorado River; a big-boned woman with eyes of slazy gray and a mop of wind-blown hair, as black as a raven's wing. Men called her Helen Blazes, and although she had settled down of late to an approach at domesticity there still remained, encircling her, a sort of aura which was redolent of dollar a bottle beer and sin.

It was high noon, one of those Arizona summer days when the sun settles down in earnest to show what it can really do, and there were two wagon outfits waiting here. The mules were bickering over their hay in the dusty corral.

"That's Dan Brent, fetching his wife home."

And, as she spoke, a change came over her. It was as if a soft hand had smoothed some of the lines away from her face. But the teamsters did not notice this, for their eyes were on the distant rig; and when they looked toward the doorway she was no longer there. A few moments later they heard her voice within the house.

"You, Jerkline! Where the hell is that man gone to?" And then, after an interval that was filled with strident profanity, "Oh, there you be. Start up that fire and fill the kittle. Pronto now!"

There came the clashing of crockery, the swishing of a broom, and other sounds of household activity. Before she reappeared to resume her stand in the doorway, her wind-blown hair was gathered to her head, screwed up behind in a tight wad; and she was wearing a pale blue dress with many ribbons. Her eyes were wide and bright. She shaded them with her hand and, as she gazed at the approaching buckboard, she said under her breath:

"Such a little thing! And clean beat out. I'll be!"

The buckboard was very near now. The teamsters had risen to their feet. Helen Blazes waved her hand. Alice's eyes were fixed upon her. So, in that moment, the two of them beheld each other for the first time. Their glances met; and both of them were smiling.

Dan Brent was sitting erect; he was looking straight ahead. He waved his hand; he touched the mules with the whip. The buckboard rattled by. For some seconds Helen Blazes remained in the doorway with her lips still parted and the eagerness still in her eyes. Then she turned and went back into the shadowed room.

Meantime Dan Brent was saying to his wife:

"That woman, sweet? You would not want to know her."

She glanced at him as if she would have liked to make some reply but she held her peace. And two hours later they pulled up at the home ranch.

Ed Buckner was Brent's foreman that year, and it happened that the horse which he was riding had cast a shoe. The animal was mean; so he had gotten Curt Wilcox to help him; and these two seasoned riders, who had fought alongside their employer in more than one bloody skirmish to maintain this lonely outpost in No Man's land, were cooling off in the blacksmith shop after their struggle, when the buckboard rattled down the stony road. They came clipping out on their high heels, lean waisted, burned dark by the border sun, their tight jean breeches tucked into their boot tops, their heavy revolvers swinging by their sides. Brent lifted his bride lightly from the seat and swung her down. Their bronzed hands went to their hat brims when he introduced them, and their eyes bestowed upon her a frank admiration. There passed between the three men brief words of greeting, as casual as if their parting had been for a day instead of nearly two months.

"Things going all right?" the cattleman asked.

"Fine as silk," the foreman answered. "And quiet as a Sunday school." He told the small news of the range—the changing feed, the water conditions and the strays which had drifted in from other remote neighborhoods. Curt Wilcox, who was busy unhooking the team, called out:

"Jack Slade's back in the country. Last week——"

"We'll go into the house, sweet," Dan said abruptly. He gave the cowboy a sour look as they departed.

It was a long one storey adobe building and you entered into a narrow hallway. Near the door there was a little table and on this a single action revolver. Buckner, who was following with some of the luggage, saw his employer pick up the weapon.

"Now, what's this doing here?" Brent growled. "No need for guns around the house. The country's peaceable."

The foreman regarded him in wide eyed amazement, as well he might, for Brent himself had laid that weapon in its place, and had inspected it frequently to make sure the cartridges were in the cylinder.

A little later, while Alice was in her room, her husband stole through the house on tip toe, as silently as if he were a thief. The two cowboys were saddling up in the corral when he appeared before them with three six shooters and two Winchesters.

"You boys find some place for this artillery in the bunkhouse where it's handy," he bade them. "We can't have it clutterin' up the house."

He laid the weapons by the bars and he stood frowning uneasily. At length:

"What about that fello' Jack Slade?" he asked.

"He showed up nigh to a month ago," the foreman answered. "Curt saw him in Tombstone." Brent turned to the cowboy.

"My wife ain't used to hearing about outlaws," he explained grudgingly. Curt nodded.

"Never thought of that. What I was goin' to say—I run acrost him in the Crystal Palace, and he had two others with him, Lincoln County rustlers; one of 'em done killed his partner back in the Pecos country over a silk handkerchief. Las' week the Benson stage was stood up and the driver claims he recognized the three of 'em."

Brent made no comment. Indeed, he seemed to have lost all interest by the time the narrator had finished.

"Me, I got to get back to my wife," he muttered.

When he had departed the two men gazed at the pile of weapons by the bars in silence for some time.

"I wonder now; has getting married cramped his style?" Curt mused.

That question was to get its answer in days to come, and with it they were to receive considerable food for thought on the subject of women's ways.

In the meantime life went on very much as usual. Now and then the cattleman walked over from the house to give a word or two of instructions to Ed Buckner as to the next day's riding.

On one of these occasions there were three outsiders in the group by the bunkhouse. After the fashion of the land along the border, where a man dropped in for a meal or for a month according to his needs or fancy, and without a word of explanation or invitation, these guests had turned their horses into the corral and had eaten supper with the hands; a little man with pale blue eyes that were as hard as marbles and as restless as drops of quicksilver, and two bulky unshaven companions, neither of whom had said half a dozen words since their arrival. Brent appeared out of the shadows and stood there regarding them beneath lowered lids.

"You, Slade," he said, "clear out of this, and take them two with you. I don't want any cow thieves on my range."

The little man had risen to his feet. His eyes shifted before the cattleman's steady gaze and he laughed unpleasantly. He beckoned to his companions.

"All right, boys." Then, as they were departing to the corral, he called over his shoulder: "Next time we see each other, Brent, yo' better come fighting."

Ed Buckner and Curt Wilcox, who had been keeping their hands near the butts of their six shooters during this interchange, closed in behind the trio; and when the hoofbeats of the horses were growing faint up the road, the foreman returned. He walked toward the house with his employer.

"Not that it's any of my business, Dan," he said when they were out of earshot from the others, "but the next time yo' make a play like that, I wisht yo'd wear yo'r gun."

To Curt Wilcox he confided his feelings more fully later in the evening.

"Which, the way he goes around without his six-shooter, yo'd think this was the State of Ioway," he growled.

"It's his wife," Curt said. "I heard him givin' the cook hell, the other day, for shootin' at a tin can behind the house. He done tol' him she was a-scared of guns."

"Well, he'd better break her into 'em, if he aims to last the season through," the foreman said wearily. "He cain't expect to go on f rever in this country without trouble."

But the weeks went by and no sign of trouble appeared. You would have thought, if you had been there, that Dan had told his bride the truth that afternoon of their arrival when he said the country was peaceable. The renegades of two nations, who drifted back and forth across the lines on loot or murder bent, seemed to have taken to heart the lessons which the cattleman had administered in other years by swift raid and bloody reprisal, for they were giving the place a wide berth.

Brent had shipped a side saddle from the East and one of the cowboys had gentled a pony for Alice; and sometimes now she rode with him when he went forth to oversee the work. More often, however, she remained at home, alone through the long hours. One day returning to the ranch house much earlier than usual Dan found no sign of her. He hurried down to the corrals where some of the men were breaking colts. Buckner was sitting on the top rail and when he saw the look in his employer's face he scrambled down.

"What's up, Dan?" he demanded.

"My wife." Brent's lips were twitching. "She's gone."

"Oh, that's all right," the other reassured him. "I saw her saddling up an hour ago. The' was a wagon outfit going down the road. Greasers. She struck off after 'em." He pointed to the southward. "I reckon that's her now."

The lines on Brent's face smoothed away.

"It's her all right." He drew a long breath of relief.

She spurred her pony to a run when she saw her husband and her eyes were bright when he helped her from the saddle.

"Oh, Dan!" she cried. "There was a woman in one of those wagons, and she can speak English."

"Listen, sweet," he told her softly, "you mustn't ride so far after this."

She made no reply to the admonition, but her eyes were still radiant when she went to the house. And after this when he was absent as he was nearly every day now from dawn until sunset, it became her habit to saddle up within an hour of his departure and to ride away. Often she was not back until late in the afternoon.

Summer had passed. The golden month of October was well along. The cattle were due for delivery in a few days and Brent must go to Tombstone to get the money for the payment in good gold coin.

It had been his intention to take Alice with him, for it had occurred to him that she might be getting lonely here; but at the last moment news came that made him change his mind.

It was Helen Blazes who delivered the tidings. Brent was riding past the little adobe house on the mesa one afternoon with a number of the men, moving a bunch of young stuff up the valley, when he saw her standing in the doorway. Remembering that noontide when he had driven by with Alice on the seat beside him, he felt a twinge of remorse, for, after all, she was an old timer like himself. So he turned aside to have a word with her.

If she bore any ill will for that previous occasion she did not show it.

"Dave Mather and Pony Deal was riding through the other day, on their way to the San Simon. They said Jack Slade's been making his brag that he's going to kill you before Winter."

"Some of these days, right soon, he'll get his chance," Brent replied indifferently; and after he was in the saddle he added, "Much obliged."

But he was frowning when he rode away and that night he told Alice:

"I reckon when I make that trip to Tombstone, I'm going to leave you behind." It hurt him sorely to see the disappointment in her face and it hurt him still worse to see the brave smile with which she tried to hide it.

And when he set forth on the journey he lingered at the ranch house door to bid his wife good-bye. Since he had taken her from that peaceful little Eastern village he had not left her overnight, and he would be gone five days.

"There's nothing to be afraid of, sweet," he told her. "Plenty of men about the place to look out for you and even if you were alone the country's safe."

She smiled up into his face and he bent his head; he kissed her fiercely. Then he hurried away to his horse and he leaped into the saddle.

So it came that two days later Brent started back from Tombstone with a canvas sack filled with gold pieces hidden in the slicker roll behind the cantle of his saddle, and with his mind fixed on the fear that might be torturing Alice instead of the danger which might be waiting for himself.

He had crossed the mesquite flat and he was traveling upward among the granite slopes of the Dragoon range to South Pass when he heard the clanking of wagon wheels on the rocks somewhere ahead. The vehicle came into sight, a ramshackle affair drawn by a span of crowbait horses and Helen Blazes was holding the reins. Her [illegible] chanted a cheerful greeting.

"You're [illegible] the man I'm lookin' for." She [illegible] the [illegible] with her foot and Brent saw Jerkline lying on a bed of hay in the wagon box.

"The fool," she explained, "had to go an' get himself kicked by a mare and I'm fetching him in to the doctor with a busted leg."

The invalid raised his head long enough to grin half heartedly at the cattleman and to get rid of a stale quid of tobacco.

"How's things at the ranch?" Brent asked abruptly. She must have read the anxiety in his face for she answered swiftly.

"Fine, so I hear. Your wife's all right."

There was a queer look in her eyes as if she would have liked to say something more perhaps, but she merely hunched her big shoulders as she changed the subject.

"What I want to tell you. I was plumb scared when we pulled out with him in misery and a dozen things to be tended to, so I done left Jerkline's rifle standing in the corner of the room where any one can see it that happens to come along, and I been fretting for fear some Greaser might walk off with it. I wisht you'd stop in when you're riding by an' hide it under the bed for me."

"Sure," he said. "I'll tend to it."

He touched his horse with the spur and rode on, and before the rattle of the wagon had died away behind him, his mind had gone to the home ranch. He could see Alice at this moment, standing in the doorway where he had left her; he could see her face twisted with fear.

All day he rode with that vision before him and far into the night. Before the sun had risen he was in the saddle, pressing on. It was the first hour of afternoon when he saw the little abode house on the mesa and the old dump of the Morning Glory mine protruding from the hillside far ahead of him.

The little house at the Morning Glory mine had been a sort of way station for travelers ever since the days of old Cochise and Mangas Colorado. This afternoon it was sheltering three of them.

Their horses were in the tumble-down stable by the corral, saddled up and bridled all ready for the owners to mount at a moment's notice. The owners themselves were leaving no sign of their presence to betray them to chance passers.

There were three of them. Two were large men who would have looked the better for a shave apiece, but whom no amount of sartorial attention could have rendered prepossessing. The third was undersized, with a smooth face and pale blue eyes that were as hard as marbles, as restless as drops of quicksilver.

Brent pulled up before the door. He dismounted and he left his horse standing with the reins dragging on the ground and as he laid hand on the latch, the door went swinging open; he heard a step within.

His hand dropped to the butt of his revolver; he leaped aside. The weapon swept from its holster; [illegible] all those swift movements [illegible] the [illegible] of an instant [illegible] he released the trigger. [illegible] like the [illegible] finger that the [illegible] had been perfected by long practice. He had a [illegible] glimpse of Slade [illegible] of the little room [illegible] with [illegible]. The two [illegible] that they were [illegible].

A fog of sulphurous smoke filled the doorway. Through the fumes Brent saw the form within, leaning toward him. The arms were sagging and he heard the big revolver clatter on the floor. The knees bent; the form seemed to crumple, all at once. It slumped down beside the weapon. Brent felt his left leg buckle under him and he fell upon the threshold. A voice called out somewhere behind the house.

Brent raised his body on one arm and the movement brought a [illegible] of pain. His leg was broken above the knee. The [illegible] smoke of black powder had [illegible]. Save for himself and the dead man the room [illegible] others. He [illegible].

"Two men out there." He started to [illegible] his position so that he would face the doorway. It was slow job and the sweat was dripping out in big drops on his forehead before he was done. The only living creature in sight was his horse. It had shied away from the noise of the firing and it was walking down the road, holding its head to one side to keep the dragging reins clear of its hoofs. He felt a sudden throb of hope; if it went on home the men would realize that something had gone wrong; help would come in time then. The flat report of a rifle broke the silence. The animal went down; it kicked and then lay still, a [illegible] heap in the glaring sunshine.

Next the door there was a window and save for these two apertures the walls were blank. There [illegible] Slade [illegible] standing in a corner at the [illegible]. Brent [illegible] at his [illegible] the [illegible] he stripped [illegible] handkerchief around the limb and drew the knot so tightly that it sank into the flesh.

There was no sound outside; the chances were, if they were intending to make a rush, they would have tried it already. He set to work to get the rifle. He hitched himself across the floor, one foot at a time, and sometimes less, and every movement made him sick with pain. When he was sick facing the doorway with the weapon in his hands at last, he was so weak that the wide mesa seemed to be heaving like a restless sea.

It was [illegible] for a long time and no [illegible]. And he could [illegible] up [illegible] [illegible] was moving in the house.

"All right, [illegible] be waiting for you."

He did not know how long it was before he [illegible] reached [illegible] a dozen [illegible] through the [illegible] between the roof [illegible] the thatch roof.

He knew that [illegible] beneath the [illegible]. The end was near.

His thoughts returned to Alice. She would be waiting at the home ranch and he would not come. Then [illegible] the doorway where he had [illegible] a few days [illegible] would [illegible] coming [illegible] who had made the discovery, perhaps one of his own cowboys. And he would bring the news to her.

He had seen death before quite close to him. He did not fear it now. He had grown used to it. But he [illegible]

That gave him fear [illegible] picture of her as she heard the tidings. Then the secret which he had been hiding from her so carefully would be revealed to her. The brutality of the land where he had brought her would [illegible] her. And he would not be there to help or shield or even to give comfort.

Such a fragile little thing! And he would be alone.

The [illegible] were getting [illegible]. A red brand fell upon the floor beside him. He slapped it out with his hand and the flame [illegible] in pain. He heard [illegible] above his head. When the air was black with the smoke and the heat was beyond bearing he crawled forth across the threshold. And as he came out [illegible] and racked with pain, the rifles began clattering.

A dense brown cloud gushed from the doorway, hiding him within it, shutting all things from him. He lay there blinded, listening to the flat angry voices of the rifles, wondering why death did not find him, striving to penetrate the smothering blanket which enwrapped him, that in this, his last moment, he might find an enemy and at least die fighting. But no one showed.

The [illegible] of the firing was not [illegible]. The [illegible] were coming from the old Morning Glory dump [illegible]. The evening breeze lifted the smoke from him and he heard the [illegible] of hoofs on the [illegible] [illegible] coming down the [illegible].

The [illegible] descended [illegible] him [illegible] was Alice and she had a rifle in her hand.

Afterward [illegible] told him that he had [illegible] that it was [illegible] torn strips from her clothing and bandaged his wound [illegible] the rifle across her lap guarding him until Curt Wilcox and Ed Buckner, who had ridden out in search for her, found her that evening.

These things he learned two days later when his strength was beginning to return, but there was something else that he wanted to know, the answer to a question which was puzzling him sorely. He waited until he was home with Alice and she was telling him her story before he asked it.

She looked so little, sitting there beside his bed, so little and so fragile, and her face was like a flower. And, as he listened to her soft voice, it all seemed more unreal to him than ever.

[illegible] When I saw the [illegible] I [illegible] from [illegible]. [illegible] to help. [illegible] down on [illegible] I began shooting. They started for their horses. They must have thought it was the cowboys. They didn't [illegible] more than two shots before they ran away."

Now he could wait no longer and he asked the question which was heavy on his mind.

"How come you with a rifle, sweet?"

She gave him a look, a strange look which he could not understand.

"I suppose I should have told you long ago, dear, how I learned to handle a gun and took one with me when I rode alone, and how I came to know that Slade and those two men were bragging they would kill you."

She [illegible] and bent her head to [illegible].

LOVABLE - - - By Mary Raymond

CHAPTER XXI

After a moment Tony got up, slipped the invitation in his pocket and left the office. On the way home he stopped in a restaurant. He and Ann had often eaten there. "A hot dog and coffee. Make it strong," Tony said, "and bring me some water and an extra glass."

Mac was still at the telephone.

"Sure, Mister Tony." The proprietor came back after he had given the order, leaning companionably on the marble-topped counter.

"The young lady? She has gone away, perhaps?"

Tony said angrily, "Haven't you enough business, Nick, to keep you busy?"

"Sure, sure I have." The man began wiping off the spotless counter and left his irate young customer alone.

Tony got into his car and drove home. Alone in his apartment he read the invitation again.

The card was a charm. Present it and some liveried idiot would bow and scrape and usher him into the Heath home. Someone else would take his hat and coat and then he would be in a crowd and no one would be the wiser. He would see Ann dancing—Ann who had not answered his note, who had avoided him. The desire to see her was like madness in his blood.

He fixed himself a drink and undressed. He tried reading himself to sleep. It was no use.

The thought of the card kept bobbing up in his stream of thought. All he had to do was to be John MacDonald for tonight—to a butler and a few strangers. And he would see Ann. He would have the chance he had been waiting for to tell her what a rotten thing she had done, running away from him that night, marrying Peter Kendall when she loved him—Tony. When she knew in her heart that Eileen and all the other women in the world could go straight to hell as far as Tony was concerned.

It was no use. He would have this thing out with her. Now. He got out his evening clothes with shaking fingers and turned on his bath.

Millicent had introduced them: "Valeria, I want you to know Peter's wife. Ann, this is Valeria Bennett."

Valeria had smiled at Ann in a friendly fashion, saying, "I hope we are going to be friends, Ann. I've known Peter since we both wore baby clothes."

Ann said, "Thank you." Nothing more. She had seen the hard glint in Valeria's eyes and guessed the hatred behind that soft and friendly speech.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN HOLLISTER, pretty and 20, breaks her engagement to TONY MICKLE, commercial artist, because of his drinking and general irresponsibility. The same day PETER KENDALL, wealthy and prominent, learns how VALERIA BENNETT, his fiancee, has deceived him, and tells her everything is over between them.

Ann and Peter, both heart-sick and disillusioned, meet in a restaurant. When Peter asks her to marry him, Ann agrees.

They are married that night and set out for Florida. They spend several weeks there happily until Peter is called home again because of business. All of the Kendall family except Peter's sister, MILLICENT, snub Ann.

Millicent gives a dance to introduce Ann to society. Tony secures one of the invitations and his jealousy flames afresh.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Valeria introduced the man beside her and then, suddenly, laid a hand on Peter's arm. "Peter, dance this with me for old time. Ann, a fair exchange is no robbery. Tommy is a grand dancer."

Ann danced with Tommy, feeling very angry with Peter because he had allowed Valeria to take possession of him in such a fashion. Feeling very angry with herself because she had been unable to cope with Valeria.

"Peter," said Valeria, "will you come into the conservatory with me a moment?"

"No."

"Why?"

"Because there's no reason why I should."

"So logical all of a sudden," whispered Valeria. "Or is it because you're afraid your wife will be jealous?"

"Ann jealous!" His vehemence was revealing.

Then the girl didn't care anything about him. That made things easier.

"Come on, Peter. I think you owe it to me to talk things over. You can't know how hard all this has been for me."

Peter looked down and saw her eyes filled with tears. "All right," he said.

Ann saw them leave the ballroom. Her face flushed. It was an instant later that she saw Tony making his way toward her through the crowd.

Her heart turned over. Tony here! Probably he would make a scene.

Not caring who had the dance, eager to get away with him before something terrible happened, Ann answered, "Yes, it is."

In the conservatory Valeria was saying, "Please don't stay angry with me, Peter. It's more than I can bear. I've been punished enough, haven't I? I'm human and it's killing me to see Ann in the place which really belongs to me."

Peter said, shocked, "Valeria!"

"Oh yes. I know what you're thinking—that I brought all this on myself and that now I should be a better sport and have more pride. You're hard and cold, Peter."

"Not hard, Valeria. But there's no use in all this."

"If I thought she loved you I wouldn't feel as I do. But she doesn't love you, does she?"

Peter's eyes met Valeria's. He did not answer. No, of course Ann didn't love him. But it was something he did not have to tell Valeria.

He was on his feet. He said curtly that it was time to go back because he had the next dance with Ann.

Valeria entered the ballroom with him silently, hating the feeling that the first blow in the battle had been won by Ann.

Someone claimed her for the dance, and Peter looked around for Ann. After a moment he saw her. She was talking to some chap who was holding her too closely, staring angrily into her eyes. Ann's face was white.

And then he saw the stranger pull Ann up in his arms and swiftly, impulsively, lay his cheek against her hair. Peter took a step forward, then stopped, astonished at his emotion.

He had the feeling that he would like to tear Ann from the fellow's arms. No, he wanted to knock the man down. He stood, watching them. Hating Tony—he had guessed the man was Tony—with a deep, terrible hatred. Because Tony was holding Ann too closely. Because her face was white and her eyes looked dark and frightened.

While he was watching Ann and Tony walked toward the conservatory. Cocktails were being served. Peter took one mechanically.

A girl passing, said, "Funny to see you drinking, Peter."

Peter stared at the glass in his hand, drank the contents and set the glass down. The stuff was like water. It didn't begin to match the fire in his veins.

The thing to do was to get away from here—out in the open until he got hold of himself.

Tony had said, "If you don't come some place with me, Ann, I'll kiss you here before all these people. You wouldn't like that, would you?"

"No," she answered steadily. "I wouldn't."

Because she knew Tony was capable of carrying out his threat, she led the way to the conservatory. She had no feeling of disloyalty. Hadn't Peter danced off with Valeria and talked with her in the quiet secluded place?

Ann and Tony sat down. His miserable eyes held her, [illegible] crushed her cool, small [illegible].

"I'm [illegible] thinking of you, loving him," Tony said hoarsely. "Ann, you can't go through with this. You can't. I won't let you, darling."

Ann said in a low troubled voice, "Peter and I are just friends. He doesn't care anything about me, Tony. But he's been wonderfully kind to me."

Tony, searching her eyes said, "You're not lying? He doesn't love you?"

"He doesn't love me at all."

It was hard to believe there could be any one in the world so blind as not to love Ann. But that was her story. Tony remembered people said that Peter Kendall had been engaged to that baby-faced Valeria Bennett. He had only scorn and contempt for Peter, but he was feeling tremendously relieved, almost happy again, because Peter was so blind.

Bless the poor fool!

He did not ask Ann if she loved Peter. He knew whom Ann loved. He had seen her heart in her eyes when he had talked about marrying her. Trudging along by his side almost skipping, "Oh, Tony, do you mean it?" Her voice full of joy and adoration.

He had known that [illegible] to do was to whistle and there would be his devoted girl, ready to march off with him to the parson. This Kendall had snatched her up in an unguarded moment to pay off a score he owed the Bennett girl. And probably would be only too glad now to have the tangle unwound by legal method.

Tony was pulling Ann toward him, his dark head bent toward her. Ann, resisting, whispered, "Please let's play the game fairly."

He drew back then, not because of her words, but because he had heard some one enter the conservatory. Peter's face was white and stern. He said, "Isn't this mine, Ann?"

"Peter," said Ann in a trembling voice. "I want you to meet Tony Mickle."

The two men bowed [illegible].

Ann said, "Good-by, Tony."

He answered, "Good night, Ann."

And because she guessed his pain she said gently, "Dance with me again."

"Some other time. I'm running along now."

Flame in Tony's eyes. Steel in Peter's.

Ann [illegible] something terrible which had been about [illegible]

Mayor Clarke Urges Citizens To Support Boy Scout Movement

Stresses Benefits of Training in Radio Address Friday Night

Stressing the importance of development and associations for boys and the benefits to be derived through the Boy Scout training, His Worship Mayor J. A. Clarke, in a radio address over CJCA Friday evening, urged the fullest support in the "Welcome Baden-Powell" campaign for funds to promote the movement.

Mayor Clarke

Following is the full text of the mayor's address:

"My address on this occasion is in the nature of passing on to others, as Chief Magistrate of the City, the City's interest and the citizens' desire in regard to the placing of Edmonton and Northern Alberta in the forefront of Boy Scout movements.

"A week ago the Lieutenant-Governor of this province, in his capacity as representing the Chief Scout, His Majesty the King, gave such information as should be given in the forefront of the Scout announcement for this year's activities.

"It is my duty and pleasure at this time to declare the campaign open which we hope will be completed before Lord Baden-Powell visits Edmonton on his tour around the world in the spring, for the collection of the quota which has been allocated to Northern Alberta.

"From Red Deer north, our share has been placed at $18,000 spread over a period of five years, that is $3,600 per year. The Provincial Council through its secretary, W. S. Buckman, phone 24634, will furnish all the information necessary to prospective subscribers as to just what is expected.

"I have been asked by the committee to lay stress upon the fact that the Scout movement is not in any sense to be confused with military activities. As a matter of fact, in the early days of the Scout movement, owing to the military activities of Baden-Powell, this confusion arose, but the Scout movement is a movement for peace, and primarily for the development of the youth of this and other lands.

"The movement is spread throughout the British Empire, under the general direction of His Majesty the King. This should be understood, and the need for assistance to our growing boys, who at the active age between 10 and 20 have so much depending upon their associations and their physical development.

"The Scout movement is second to none in the development of health, in the development of a proper spirit amongst citizens, and in the development of patriotism of the very best kind."

Stepping Along

By Ramsey Little

A Weekly Column Dedicated to the Youth of Alberta by the Edmonton Young Men's Liberal Club.

YOUNG MAN! I know you are very busy, but may I ask you to pause awhile? Youth is such a carefree time that it gives little thought to the future: content to live from day to day. Political and social problems hold very little appeal for the average young man. He relies upon an older generation to carry that burden until such time as he is ready to forego his play-time and turn to sterner things.

But, again I say, pause awhile: do you realize that these are very momentous days for youth? That the world is going through a social and economic change, slow it is true, but nevertheless sure, that this change is of immense importance to you; that it will have a direct influence upon your whole future.

The system as our Fathers knew it has broken down; that is admitted by all, and a new one is slowly emerging to take its place. The new system will undoubtedly be partly spontaneous, but the major part of it will be man-made.

Are you going to have a part in that remaking? If you are not prepared to assist in the planning of the structure then you may be assured that there will be only a small portion of it built to fit your needs.

DURING the past week the daily newspapers carried reports of a number of meetings in different parts of the world where youth was addressed by some of the leading statesmen.

Canada's Prime Minister spoke to a Young Men's Club in the Maritimes.

Ramsay MacDonald, the British Prime Minister, addressed a similar gathering of young men, two examples which serve to show that the leaders of these two nations realize that youth should be considered.

The appeal has gone out: Is youth prepared to respond? Is it sufficiently awake to the need of responding?

One of the peculiarities of the Saxon temperament is its slowness to action. During periods of distress this has proven to be an asset, recognized by others as a bulldog determination to endure which at times verges almost onto stubborness.

Canadian youth is slow to action, during the worst period of this depression it has shown fortitude and patience, believing that the nation's leaders would eventually bring a return of prosperity.

Now, however, the time has come for action; a new structure is in the process of building and only those who take a part in the construction can hope to share in the rewards.

MR BENNETT like a good architect, has announced his plans for the new structure. They contain [illegible] the approved modern conveniences and some very few of his own invention. He informs all and sundry that they may accept or reject them as they see fit, but he himself is convinced that they are the only ones which can be of effect.

Undoubtedly the plan has been well presented and has at the moment considerably improved the advocator's chances at the next election, but it would be wise to give them a careful analysis and decide first are they practical, and if so, will they be put into effect or are they for the use of orators only.

To our way of thinking, the program has very little that can be taken seriously and the net result would be as little "Reform of Capitalism" as there has been "Ending of Unemployment."

The acid test from the standpoint of youth rests upon the provisions made for their particular welfare, on the surface there seems to be little if any.

TOO much praise cannot be given to the Alberta Liberal leader, Mr. W. R. Howson, for his sympathetic understanding of the problems of youth.

Through the economic conferences held throughout this province he has made himself familiar with the problems which confront the people as a whole. Full provision was made at these conferences for the presentation of the problems of youth and many of the suggestions [illegible] were incorporated in the provincial platform.

It is our contention that the most satisfactory solution to our problems, provincial and Dominion, will come through the combined efforts of the people and their leaders.

One-man parties are dictatorships and are designed solely to further the ends of the dictator.

REFORM of Capitalism is the catch-word; when capitalism is reformed then we will have a Utopia. It is a pure fallacy. Reform of capitalism by a capitalist will never cure unemployment, and that is the question a young man is most interested in.

Under Capitalism great things have been accomplished and even greater things may yet be done under that system, but there will have to be a much greater measure of reform than has yet been suggested by Mr. Bennett, and it must be done in the near future.

So I say to you again, young man, pause awhile! Your future is in the making. Politics is no longer a game, it is time for you to take a place in the council of this nation.

If you want a repetition of the past five years then you may go on dreaming, but if you still have a spark of manhood left within you, then you must act.

Think, and then act, youth stands at the threshold. Let it use, speak with one voice, and take the step which will lead us all to a better social order, a place where there is both work and play, and no place for work-camps or doles.

ANGLICAN YOUTH CONFERENCE HERE

Anglican young people of northern Alberta are keenly anticipating their annual rally which has just been announced to take place in Edmonton, February 16 and 17. About 200 young people are expected to attend this big event.

Arrangements have been made for a Saturday afternoon meeting at which speakers will be heard and youth problems discussed, and the executive is also planning for a Sunday afternoon discussion period. Saturday there will be a corporate communion and morning prayer.

Art Potter is chairman of the rally committee of the Diocesan council of the Anglican Young People's Association, under whose auspices the meeting will be held.

GREAT SALT LAKE

Sunset on Great Salt Lake

On the shores of Great Salt Lake

Sea gulls over Great Salt Lake.

Bathers cannot sink in its waters.

In one of the great valleys of the Rocky Mountains, near Salt Lake City, lies Great Salt lake, a sheet of salt water 75 miles long and 30 to 50 miles wide. Thousands of tourists visit the lake annually to enjoy the novelty of a bath in its waters which are so heavy a body easily floats.

The average depth of the lake is 20 feet, and its position is approximately 4,216 feet above sea level. Owing to the variation of rainfall in the region its size fluctuates. In 1850 its area was 1,750 square miles; in 1869 the area was 2,170 miles. The water is a natural brine, containing 14 to 23 per cent. of saline constituents. The amount of salt in the whole basin has been estimated at 400,000,000 tons, and its manufacture is an important industry.

First mention of the lake was made by Baron La Hontan, in 1689, his information being obtained from Indians. It was first explored and described in 1843 by Fremont.

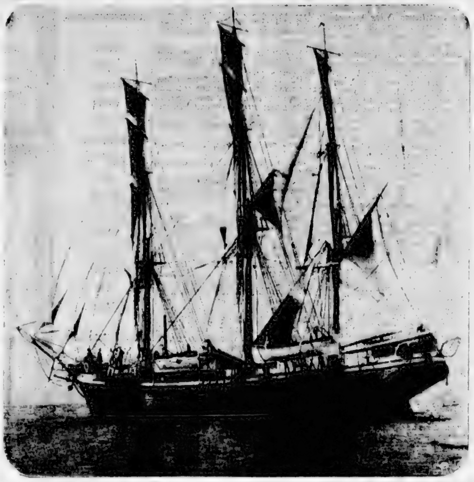
Windjammer Voyage For Boys



Here is what is reputed to be the only full-rigged British ship afloat. It is the "Joseph Conrad" and was recently purchased by Mr. A. J. Villiers of Great Bricett, Suffolk, from Denmark. The owner plans a voyage around the world in the frigate and has offered places on board to British boys.

PROVINCE HAS STRONG DRIVE FOR SCOUTING

Leaders in Public Life Back Move to Raise Roll to 10,000

With the object of raising the present Alberta Scout population of 6,500 to 10,000, the Alberta Boy Scouts Association has launched the provincial "Welcome Baden-Powell" campaign, which is being featured in connection with the coming visit of the world chief Scout in April.

The campaign is part of a coast-to-coast program, the first gun in which was fired by the Governor-General and Chief Scout for Canada, who told a national radio audience: "To do honor to the approaching visit of Lord Baden-Powell of Gilwell, founder of the Boy Scout movement, I ask the citizens of Canada to provide funds sufficient to support and extend the Scout organization in this country for the next five years."

In Alberta it is hoped that the campaign will raise a fund of $35,000, which will be sufficient to carry on the extension of Scouting for a five-year period.

Hon. W. L. Walsh, Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Scout for Alberta, is campaign patron and Senator Patrick Burns is honorary chairman. Provincial Commissioner J. H. Woods is honorary vice-chairman.

That the campaign is receiving the full support of leaders in Alberta public life is indicated by the strong honorary campaign committee which includes: Premier R. G. Reid, Chief Justice Horace Harvey, Senator W. A. Griesbach, Senator W. A. Buchanan, Hon. George Hoadley, Dr. R. C. Wallace, Dr. J. S. McEachern, Col. James Ramsey, Archbishop O'Leary, Bishop A. E. Burgett, Rabbi Jacob J. Eisen, Rev. H. A. McLeod, Dr. A. R. Gibson, Dr. W. Morrish, A. Farmilo, L. Lloyd Jones, Mayor J. A. Clarke, C. G. O'Connor, M. C. McCannel, [illegible] V. Cook, C. McKenzie, C. D. [illegible], H. P. Seager, J. D. Wallace, W. Wilkins, Russell W. Speers, and Robert Le Maitre. W. J. Dick is chairman of the provincial campaign committee.

In Northern Alberta R. V. McCosham is chairman of the "teams" committee, with C. G. O'Connor as vice-chairman. Dr. R. C. Wallace is in charge of "speakers" and J. H. Fulton of publicity.

Guides Guests Sister Company

The young Guide company of St. John's Anglican Church known as the Twelfth, enjoyed a visit of the Eleventh (Calgary Trail) company when Guide Captain Mrs. L. D. Rogers and members of her company acted as hostesses.

It was a highly instructive meeting, the younger Guides gaining a great deal of worthwhile knowledge by observing the experienced Guiding of their older sisters. Mrs. F. P. Sampson is captain of the St. John's company.

Divisional Commissioner Mrs. H. M. Newson and District Commissioner Mrs. S. H. Gandier conducted the annual inspection of the Second Company of Holy Trinity Church this week.

GUIDES PLAN WELCOME

Local Guide companies are now commencing work for the welcome of Lady Baden-Powell, who will arrive here this spring. A splendid display will be presented.

Two New Guides Fourth Company

Girl Guides of the Fourth Company of All Saints Church welcomed two new girls into the company when Vera Nightingale and Kathleen McDonald were enrolled by Guide Captain Miss Gwen Mullen. The girls are members of the Rose patrol.

Members of the Fourth are commencing preparations for the annual provincial Girl Guide handicraft competition. The company is also enjoying a course in dancing and physical culture under the direction of Mrs. H. L. Spankie.

C.G.I.T. Group Alumnae Hold Annual Dinner

The Alumnae of the Lovelight C.G.I.T. group of Garneau held its annual banquet at the Corona last Saturday, when covers were laid for 34. The president, Miss Audrey Grigg, presided and welcomed the guests.

After a few introductory remarks by the president, Miss Edith Ferguson read a letter from one of the [illegible] members and from Miss Smith, the Girls' Work secretary.

Following the toast to the King, a toast to the C.G.I.T. organization was proposed by Catherine Broad and aptly replied to by Miss Mae Sutcliffe, sponsor of the Edmonton Girls' Council. Miss Ruth Freeman proposed the toast to the active Lovelight group and Miss Hazel More present leader of that group replied.

A singsong of old favorites and campsongs was led by Miss Betty Mason, accompanied at the piano by Pat Newson. Later in the evening Miss Mason entertained the guests with delightful folk song selections and Margaret Freeman with comic songs.

The guest speaker of the evening was Miss F. E. Dodds, Dean of Women at the University of Alberta, who gave an interesting account of the Pan Pacific Conference, held at Honolulu last summer, to which she was Canadian delegate.

During the evening many of the speakers expressed appreciation of the girls for the leadership and personal interest taken in them by Miss Mamie Simpson, who was the leader of the Lovelights for many years.

After the banquet Mr. David Newson played for dancing.

CALGARY SCOUT IN TROOP

Formerly associated with Calgary Scouting circles, Phil Baltrum has joined the Fourth (Garneau) troop and is now popularly known by the boys as "Owling." He has taken charge of new boys who are seeking admission as Scouts.

Some of the new boys who are now under Phil's wing include Douglas Jamieson, Douglas Jacques, Don Baker, Wilmer McMahon, Ronald Lister and Tom Strate.

Jack Burrows has been appointed as the new patrol leader of the Fourth, and Billy Andrew has been selected as his second.

CHURCHES SET YOUTH SUNDAY

A large number of Edmonton churches have arranged to set aside Sunday, February 3, as "Young People's Day" in the church. Services will largely be taken by representatives from the young people's societies of the churches, and in a number of cases the sermons will be delivered by the younger members of the congregation.

"Peace or War" will be the theme at most of the churches. The "Young People's Sunday" is sponsored by the Edmonton Interdenominational Young People's Board, which has chosen February 3 as being the Sunday closest to the organization of the first young people's society.

A Christian Endeavor Society for young people was organized at that time in 1891 by Rev. Francis Clarke who started this new world-movement in a small way in the New England states.

The committee in charge includes Norma Cuthbertson, Harold Winfield and Bill Thornton.

Dog Days In Arctic

Dog days! In most places a torrid time for everyone to steer clear of nipping mongrels, for small boys to stay out of stagnant swimming holes, and for dogs to pant for their breath and nip at flies. But in the Arctic—when the midsummer sun soars to around zero—what a difference! Without even looking for shade, these huskies on the trail near Coronation Gulf, in northern Canada, took a cooling siesta when the sledding got tough the other day. Do dog days make them mad? Well, hardly.

Hi-School Athletic Stars Now Shining Bright In Big Time

Collegiate Athletes Continue Sport in Which Majored at School

By CHARLES TODD

Where does the cream of our high school athletes go when they leave their schools on graduating day? Do they forget all about the sport they majored in during their student days? Do they take out amateur cards and join a local team or do a few of them hit big time leagues in the moneyed ranks almost immediately?

Bill Carse

Not one high school star athlete in a thousand quits the sport he or she majored in during school days. If they can do nothing else, they join a local team in a mercantile or community circuit and continue to play.

Let's follow the sporting careers of a few of last year's graduating athletes and see just what happened to them: Morey Rimstad of the champion McDougall Commercial hockey team of last year captured a berth on the Eskimos, a professional puck squad representing this city in the northwestern hockey league, while Bill Carse, his E.A.C. teammate and a former Strathcona Commercial student, graces the same lineup.

Morey Rimstad

Another of Morey's teammates, Andy Maloney, is enjoying a great season playing American Associated hockey for the Kansas City Greyhounds. Andy was a high school favorite and an old stand by. It was not surprising to the fans that he turned professional.

Mac and Neil Colville, the famous brother act of last year's smart E.A.C. squad, are chasing the puck in New York. Mac just graduated from the Page Institute last year, Neil beat him to it by a year. They both caught the eye of an eastern hockey mogul when playing in Winnipeg last year.

Neil Colville

The eastern team they are now starring on goes under the name of Brooklyn Hamilton Crescents, but is a farm team of the famous New York Rangers. The boys are stationed there for a bit more seasoning before making a debut on the crack Ranger team.

Percy Page's entire line-up of his world famous ladies basketball team, the Edmonton Commercial Graduates, nicknamed the "Grads", was drawn from high school [illegible]ates. Of course many of the [illegible] hoopsters graduated quite a few years ago but there are still a couple of players on the squad just out of high school.

Andy Maloney

Towering Noel MacDonald, rookie star of the Grad-Tulsa series, was attending McDougall last year and playing on the Grads at the same time. She signed up for a course [illegible] again this fall but landed a job [illegible] left the institute.

The three new players taken by Page this fall when a [illegible] his regulars resigned were [illegible] school girls from McDougall. [illegible] Northup, Etta Dane and Sophie Brown were selected by Coach Page to fill in the vacant spots on the squad.

These three Misses all [illegible] their basketball at high school [illegible] of them ever attended any [illegible] such as the Y.W.C.A., where [illegible] could receive outside instruction in hooping. Of course they had a vague idea of what it was all about upon leaving public school.

Those mentioned above were [illegible] real stars in their high school [illegible] but what happens to those who [illegible] "make" the team and never [illegible] star? Red Caldwell of Vic[illegible] playing senior amateur in the [illegible] and still goes to school. Bob [illegible] of McDougall is another [illegible] man. Two thirds of our junior [illegible] league is made up of present day high school students.

When a boy or girl an[illegible] proudly that he or she has [illegible] the high school team, it is no [illegible] accomplishment. From the [illegible] one can get a vague idea of the calibre of high school sport [illegible] this city. These students of [illegible] are your sporting news of [illegible]row.

LOCAL ENVOY TO MOOT IN SWEDEN

Allan Biron has registered [illegible] membership in the Canadian contingent of Rover Scouts who [illegible] attend the world Rover moot [illegible] held at Stockholm, Sweden, [illegible] summer. Lord Baden-Powell [illegible] direct from his Canadian tour [illegible] the moot and it is expected [illegible] large number of Canuck R[illegible] will follow him.

Allan is a member of the S[illegible] Edmonton (Moose) Rovers, at [illegible]ent stationed at St. Paul, where [illegible] is assisting with the local Scouts. He was a member of the C[illegible] contingent which attended the world Rover Scout moot held [illegible] Switzerland in 1932.

FORM BOYS' CLUB AT FIRST CHURCH

A club for boys between 14 and 17 years has been formed at First Presbyterian Church. Meetings [illegible] held at the church on Tuesday [illegible] nings at 7 o'clock. Lorne [illegible] phone 26981, will be pleased to [illegible] information regarding the club.

There will be a fireside [illegible] in the Lecture Hall of the church after the Sunday evening service.

Mr. Milligan's postponed [illegible] recital will be heard after the [illegible] ning service over [illegible] from 9 p.m. until 9.30 p.m.

Rev. S. W. Dyde will occupy the pulpit at both services on Sunday, in the morning choosing as [illegible] topic "Everlasting Mansions," and in the evening, "Peace."

Newspaper at Erskine High

ERSKINE, Jan. 20—Erskine High School has brought out a small paper they call Erskine Hi-Lights, with Anna Beer as editor. Miss Beer is taking Grade 12 this year, but has taught in rural schools for three years previous. Last summer she took a southern trip with a group of 20 teachers, down as far as Mexico and a short distance within the border.

The paper is put up in neat shape and is quite readable having a funsters' corner, general news, high school news and world news. Social activities of the district are covered by A. I. McIntyre; E[illegible] Reynolds is poet; Joe Barron writes the sports; Ivan Combest writes the short story, and Lew Williams begins a serial which others will carry on in the monthly editions.

Also there are advertisements of the local stores as well as cartoons, well done.

HAVING HIS WAY

Customer: Waiter! What has happened to this lobster? It's a claw short.

Waiter: Sorry, sir, but they're so fresh and full of life that they fought amongst themselves in the kitchen.

Customer: Well, take this one away and bring me one of the winners.

Pelagic water fowl and the larger birds of prey usually lay only one egg, rarely more than two.

WHEAT CLOSES DULL SESSION DOWN SLIGHTLY

WINNIPEG, Jan. 26—Traders strolled indifferently about the Winnipeg grain exchange today and wheat prices closed the dullest session of the week ⅛ cent lower, May at 82⅞ and July 82¼ cents.

Foreign buyers, who took small quantities of Canada's wheat on Thursday and Friday, their purchases approaching the 1,000,000-bushel mark, were indifferent today and no export sales were confirmed.

Cash wheat trading also was slow, but sale of a quantity of malting barley to the United States for shipment at opening of navigation injected some interest into cash coarse grains. Coarse grains futures idled.

NERVOUSNESS QUITE EVIDENT ON STOCK MART

NEW YORK, Jan. 25—The stock market exhibited some nervousness today in the face of renewed weakness in leading foreign exchanges and a rather heavy tone displayed by rail equities. Some amusement and traction issues improved along with scattered specialties. The close was irregular. Transfers approximated 350,000 shares.

EDMONTON STOCKYARDS, Jan. 26—Report from stockyards for week ending Jan. 26:—

Receipts—	Cattle	Calves	Hogs	Sheep
Saturday	115	33	161	18

Trading this week showed a material improvement on the better grades, especially any steers that are good enough for export, United States orders helping the situation materially. Sales throughout the week indicated that good and choice cattle were about 25c per cwt. higher. Other kinds selling fully steady. A few strictly choice steers fit for export sold up to $5.25. The following are the ruling prices:—

Good to choice fed calves $4.50 to $5, mediums $3.50 to $4, good to choice butcher steers $4.50 to $5, mediums $3.50 to $4, and common to fair $2 to $3, good to choice butcher heifers $3.50 to $4, mediums $2.75 to $3.25, common to fair $1.50 to $2.50, common to medium $1.25 to $1.75, canners and cutters 50c to $1, bulls $1 to $1.50.

Insufficient stocker arrivals to make a market, although there is a good demand for feeders. The general run of good stockers and feeders $2.50 to $3, choice lots up to $3.50, plain kinds $1.75 to $2.25.

Calves fully steady. Good to choice $4 to $5, common to medium $2.50 to $3.50.

The forepart of the week hogs showed a stronger tone. At the close unsettled and showing a lower tendency when carloads sold at $7.45 for the bacons, fed and watered, and trucked at $7.35. Selects bringing a premium of 50c per cwt., and butchers discounted 50c per cwt. Cuts on off-grade hogs [illegible] the same.

All offerings of sheep and lambs, particularly good ones, readily cleaned up at fully steady values. With good to choice lambs $5.25 to $5.75, others $5 down, yearlings $2.50 to $3.50, and ewes $2 to $3.

COMMONS HEARS STATE MEDICINE IS INEVITABLE

OTTAWA, Jan. 26—A plea for state medicine, a joint scheme between the Dominion and provinces, was made in the House of Commons Friday by Dr. J. P. Howden, Lib. St. Boniface. Speaking with 30 years' experience behind him, the Manitoba doctor said state medicine was inevitable and should have federal control and leadership.

For a few minutes before adjournment for the week-end the House discussed the resolution by H. E. Spencer, U.F.A., Battle River, which would instruct the government to adopt an active health policy in co-operation with the provinces. So far, it has met no active opposition in the House and probably will be passed early Monday.

Sounds Note Of Optimism For Canada

SIR ROBERT BORDEN, Canada's war time premier, who as president of the Crown Life Insurance Company, reported an impressive growth in the company's business during the past year and sounded an optimistic note for Canada's future.

POUCE COUPE MAN MISSING

BEAVERLODGE, Alta., Jan. 26—Lost somewhere on the old pack-trail between Rio Grande, on the southern fringe of the Peace River country, and Entrance, forest service headquarters town on the main line of the C.N.R., 200 miles west of Edmonton, B. Williams of Pouce Coupe has been missing since December 14, and fears are felt for his safety.

Williams had stated that he was going overland along the old hunting trails along the eastern slopes of the Rockies to take train from Entrance to McBride, B.C., to visit his wife for Christmas, and since then he has been swallowed up in the silence of the wilderness. There is no settlement along this trail, which cross many turbulent rivers, with the lonely cabin of a red or white trapper at long intervals.

It is feared here that Williams has succumbed to the intense cold which has prevailed since he left, or that he may have gone through an air hole in one of the rivers. Royal Canadian Mounted Police and British Columbia provincial police have taken up the search for him.

DULL SESSION ON MINE MART

TORONTO, Jan. 26—The mining share market concluded the week with a dull session, a weaker price tone prevailing along with meagre turnover. Senior golds, with the exception of Teck-Hughes, which was offered at 3.80 in considerable volume were lifeless and in the secondary group trade was spotty.

McIntyre dropped 75 cents to 37.50, Wright-Hargreaves 20 to 8.55 and Teck 3 to 3.81.

SIR ROBERT SOUNDS NOTE OF OPTIMISM

Annual Meeting of Crown Life Insurance Company Held

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—Rejoicing in the gradual but persistent progress of economic recovery in Canada and finding in recent world events hope of better international understanding and co-operation which he declared to be essential to a full measure of recovery, Sir Robert Borden, Canada's war-time prime minister, sounded a strong note of optimism in delivering his presidential address at the annual meeting of the Crown Life Insurance Company held in Toronto.

"Unemployment, which has always been with us, is still serious and it probably will continue so for a considerable period, but its severity has been materially diminished," he said.

WASTED SUBSTANCE

"But we should not indulge in extreme optimism. During the four years of war the world wasted its substance in destruction. During the ten succeeding years it was spendthrift. Collapse was sudden and recovery will be gradual and may still be painful even in countries such as our own, abundantly endowed with material resources and holding certain hope of eventual prosperity," added Sir Robert.

"In many other nations, measures have been put forward to combat depression, to restore confidence, to remove anomalies in the social order, to strengthen its fabric, to stimulate recovery. These have had varying success, but it is doubtful whether in any country a satisfactory measure of permanent recovery will ensue without general world recovery which chiefly depends upon assurance of peace, resumption of intercourse, exchange of products, stability of exchange and of monetary standards," he said.

Dealing with Crown Life affairs, Sir Robert stated the company "has made an impressive record which should inspire everyone concerned with full confidence."

MORE NEW POLICIES

New policies issued by the Crown Life in 1934 amounted to $29,305,916 as compared with $25,691,247 in 1933. Insurance in force was increased to $147,861,463 as compared with $138,821,915 a year ago, which constitutes a notable record. The expense ratio was again reduced.

Assets total $21,084,899.04 as compared with $18,893,081.76 a year ago.

Loans on the company's policies have substantially decreased, with the average rate of interest realized 5.79 per cent.

Mortgage loans of $8,324,953.90 comprise 40 per cent of assets. Interest paid in cash on these mortgages in 1934 amounted to more than 100 per cent of the total interest falling due. As a result, the total amount of interest overdue on all mortgages of the company represents only 1-15 of 1 per cent of the principal as against ⅛ of 1 per cent of the principal a year ago. Principal repayments have been [illegible] indulgences seldom availed of.

Every class of bonds held by the company has shown appreciation in market value during the past year and in several instances interest payments previously suspended have been resumed.

His Company Shows Record Business Year

H. R. STEPHENSON, general manager of the Crown Life Insurance Company, whose annual report disclosed an increased business in 1934 of over $29,000,000, a notable record in Canada.

CEYLON FACES THIRST MENACE

COLOMBO, Ceylon, Jan. 26—Drought Friday was added to the tragedy besetting Ceylon as a water shortage threatened to become so acute it was feared even victims of the malaria epidemic ravaging the island would have to submit to water rationing.

With thousands of persons already dead, hospitals and emergency medical centres jammed with victims, exhausted civil and military authorities sought means of coping with the new threat.

The export of planks and boards in Canada in December amounted to 98,[illegible]8,000 feet of the value of $1,780,361.

SCOTS HONOR FAMOUS POET

The immortal memory of Robert Burns, Scotland's national bard, was fittingly honored by the Edmonton Burns Club in a grand banquet held on Friday night at the Macdonald hotel, being part of a celebration in his honor that extends wherever Scotsmen are to be found.

J. M. Douglas, president of the Burns club, presided, while sitting with him at the head table were His Honor Lt. Gov. W. L. Walsh, Premier R. G. Reid, Mayor J. A. Clarke, Rev. H. A. McLeod, who delivered the address of the evening, Robert Muir, J. W. Heron, T. H. Campbell, C. A. Davidson, John McNeill, W. W. Howe, J. A. MacKinnon, Mark McClung and Clayton McLennan.

Typically Scottish was the welcome given the arrival of the haggis. Two pipers, Arthur Miller and John Robertson played it in on skirling pipes. John C. McDougall was the haggis-carrier.

Citizens Urged To Check Chimneys

Warning householders of the danger resulting from ice-choked fume-pipes caused by the high percentage of humidity in the air during the past week, J. R. Hunt[illegible], city plumbing inspector, urges that citizens check up on chimneys at their residence.

Two cases of sickness caused by fumes leaking out into the rooms when outlets became blocked with ice were reported from the South Side this week. Mr. Hunt[illegible] stresses the deadliness of these gasses and asks householders to investigate the condition of flues in their homes and take every precaution against this danger.

6—CARD OF THANKS

MRS. DONALD S. MacLEOD and family wish to thank their many friends for the kindness and sympathy extended during their recent bereavement, and also for the beautiful floral tributes. Special thanks is extended to the nurses and doctors of the University hospital. H-1-22

7—IN MEMORIAM

IN loving memory of Flora Brittle, who passed away, Jan. 26, 1933.

that are shed,
That tell of the heart that is torn,
But the passionate tears in after years,
And remembrance silently
borne.

Always remembered, Dad, Bea, Graydon and June. 629-22

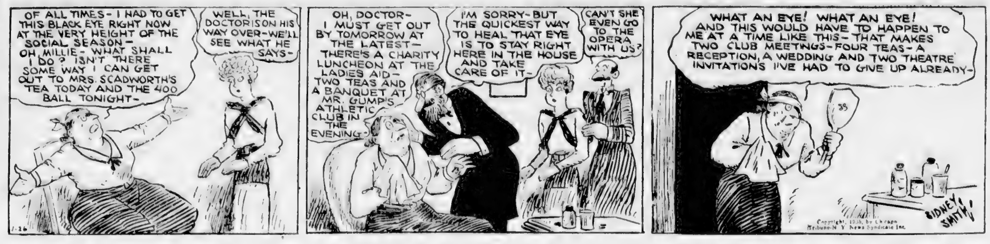
THE GUMPS — Let Nature Take Its Course —By Smith



OF ALL TIMES- I HAD TO GET THIS BLACK EYE RIGHT NOW AT THE VERY HEIGHT OF THE SOCIAL SEASON- OH, MILLIE- WHAT SHALL I DO? ISN'T THERE SOME WAY I CAN GET OUT TO MRS. SCADWORTH'S TEA TODAY AND THE 400 BALL TONIGHT-
WELL, THE DOCTOR IS ON HIS WAY OVER- WE'LL SEE WHAT HE SAYS-
OH, DOCTOR- I MUST GET OUT BY TOMORROW AT THE LATEST- THERE'S A CHARITY LUNCHEON AT THE LADIES AID- TWO TEAS AND A BANQUET AT MR. GUMP'S ATHLETIC CLUB IN THE EVENING-
I'M SORRY- BUT THE QUICKEST WAY TO HEAL THAT EYE IS TO STAY RIGHT HERE IN THE HOUSE AND TAKE CARE OF IT-CAN'T SHE EVEN GO TO THE OPERA WITH US?
WHAT AN EYE! WHAT AN EYE! AND THIS WOULD HAVE TO HAPPEN TO ME AT A TIME LIKE THIS- THAT MAKES TWO CLUB MEETINGS- FOUR TEAS- A RECEPTION, A WEDDING AND TWO THEATRE INVITATIONS I'VE HAD TO GIVE UP ALREADY-

C.M.A. Reports Industry Growth

HAMILTON, Ont Jan 26 Industrial improvement was marked during 1934 and the upward movement is likely to continue during 1935, according to reports received at the annual meeting of the council of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association held here Friday

"The great gain in Canada's exports to empire countries since 1931 has more than offset the decrease in exports to foreign countries compared with 1931," one of the experts stated

ROYAL BRIDAL PAIR SAILS TO WEST INDIES

Honeymoon Will End in April—Foreign Post May Follow

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., Jan. 26.—The Duke and Duchess of Kent sailed Friday on a cruise to the West Indies which will end their long honeymoon and mark the beginning of a busy spring and summer season.

The King's youngest son and the former Princess Marina of Greece, who were married November 29, embarked on the liner Duchess of Richmond as "ordinary first-class passengers." They flew here from Hendon in the Prince of Wales' plane. Their sea trip will take them to Jamaica, Trinidad and the Bahamas and they will return home in April.

PRIVATE PASSENGERS

The couple, whose departure was unaccompanied by ceremony, had asked that their tour be regarded as a private matter and that they be regarded as "ordinary passengers." They occupied a small suite.

Arrival at Port-of-Spain is scheduled for February 6. The couple is expected to leave the Duchess of Richmond there, making the return journey by another boat.

MAY TAKE POSITION

The departure of the Duke on the last phase of his honeymoon revived rumors that he is slated for appointment to a post overseas. The latest mentioned him as a possibility for the Governor-Generalship of Australia. This report said that with the expiration within the next few months of the term of the Australian incumbent, Sir Isaac Isaacs, the practice of securing a vice-regal representative from overseas may be revived.

Saskatchewan To Cut Jury Size

OTTAWA, Jan. 26—Amendments to the Criminal Code to provide for juries of six instead of 12 in criminal trials in Saskatchewan and to clarify the law respecting race meets were adopted on second reading in the house of commons today.

Alberta already uses a jury of six and the change for Saskatchewan was made at the request of the attorney general of that province, Minister of Justice H. Guthrie said.

Last session the law was changed to permit race tracks to hold a single 14-day meet instead of two seven-day meets. The section is clarified to make certain meets are held on 11 or seven consecutive racing days and that on any one day not more than seven races shall be held

KING CHAFES AS 'REFORMS' ARE STALLED

Charges Prime Minister Is Bluffing—Not Ready To Proceed

OTTAWA, Jan 26—Unemployment insurance and other reform measures will be presented to the House of Commons and passed in an "orderly and proper manner," Prime Minister R. B. Bennett declared Friday as he was accused by Liberal leader Mackenzie King of permitting other less important business to delay the enactment of the reform program

In a lively exchange Mr. King accused Mr. Bennett of indulging in "pure bluff" and Mr. Bennett retorted Mr. King was staging "mock heroics."

The subject before the house, a distinctive national flag for Canada, was pushed into the background as the two leaders assailed each other across the floor. When the flag resolution of C. N. Dickie (Cons., Nanaimo), came before the house secretary of state C. H. Cahan proposed that it be withdrawn

He said he had hoped some way might be found of reconciling the conflicting views on it but had come to the conclusion it would be impossible to get unanimity on either side of the house.

"FLAG" OR REFORM

The government side presented an "amazing spectacle," said Mr. King. Conservatives had taken up a whole afternoon debating the flag question among themselves when the house wanted to get on with "reform." Mr. Cahan knew then as well as he did now it would be impossible to get unanimity on the flag motion among the Conservatives but he was wrong when he ascribed the same condition to the Liberals. They were agreed

WHERE IS URGENCY

From the speech from the throne and from Mr. Bennett's radio speeches, the opposition had got the impression there was nothing so "urgent as the reform of the capitalist system." On the ground this should be expedited and on this ground alone the Liberals would consent to dropping the flag question.

"The leaders of the opposition ha[illegible] taken this opportunity to attack the government," said Mr. Bennett, "and has made statements wholly at variance with the facts. Th[illegible] was a private member's resolution

"The government has no responsibility for it and the difference of opinion which have arisen have nothing to do with the reform policy."

[illegible] were to continue as at present, while Mr. Wood said that the matter of salaries should be considered at the first finance meeting—not necessarily with a view to any further cuts—and also asked that the salary list be given every member of the board.

Mr Owen backed up Mr. Wood in this request, pointing out that there was no reason why the board should not know the salary of every employee, and no reason, also, why the press should not know it.

A mild dispute rose over this matter, with Mr. Love and the chairman and Dr. Anderson assuring Mr. Wood that no difficulties would be placed in his way.

REPORTS CHEERFUL

"Economy and efficiency" was the theme of the various annual reports presented, though there were human, personal notes struck in reports dealing with the nurses, the Ladies' Aid and the White Circle girls, the latter a good cheer organization.

A cheerful report was submitted by Mr Montgomery in regard to the [illegible] from the [illegible] municipalities which have signed up with the hospital for treatment of patients. So popular are these agreements becoming, that collections from municipalities were now $18,276, in comparison with some $1,000 for the same period of the previous years. Brakeman Is Acquitted But Loses His Job

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—Edward S. Lynch freed of a manslaughter charge in connection with the Dundas train wreck Christmas night will not be reinstated in the Canadian National Railway service it was learned Friday.

The brakeman was acquitted Thursday night by a jury in Hamilton. The C.N.R. had no official statement to make. The Toronto Telegram quotes a "high official" as saying Lynch was considered by the railway "definitely negligent, and on this account he will not be reinstated."

GEORGE P. SMITH OPENS CAMPAIGN IN FIRST STORE

DUHAMEL, Jan. 26.—Commemorating the 34th anniversary of the beginning of his career in the west, George P. Smith, federal Liberal candidate in the Camrose constituency, will fire the opening salvo of his campaign on February 1 in the building which was his former store and is now the Duhamel town hall

On February, 1901, Mr. Smith took over business in a general store at Duhamel. The building was then at the Battle river, just below [illegible] little mission church, built in 1883. After conducting a successful general merchandise and fur trading business there for several years Mr. Smith moved to Camrose, where his rise to fame has been nearly meteoric. He was in the dry-goods and publishing business in Camrose before entering politics.

The old Duhamel store in which Mr Smith first started was moved [illegible] from Battle river to the present railway townsite of Duhamel, approximately one mile south of the mission

Unless roads are blocked with drifted snow a record attendance is expected in the town hall. Mr. Smith expects to speak in New Norway and Camrose next.

2 NEW MODELS GIVEN PUBLIC BY CHEVROLET

1935 Cars Feature High-Powered Performance With Economy

New 1935 Master and Standard models, strongly emphasizing beauty and style and featuring high-powered performance with economy, are announced by Chevrolet. The 1935 Standard Chevrolets are on display at dealer showrooms in the city for the first time today, and Master models will be available soon. Dealers are now in possession of full details.

Master body models include 5-passenger Coach, 5-passenger Coach with trunk, 5-passenger De Luxe Coach with trunk, 2-passenger Coupe, 4-passenger Coupe with Rumble Seat, 4-passenger De Luxe Coupe with Rumble Seat, 5-passenger Sedan, 5-passenger Sedan with trunk, 5-passenger De Luxe Sedan with trunk, and De Luxe Convertible with Rumble Seat.

5-PASSENGER SEDAN

In addition to the Coach, Coupe and Roadster, which comprised the Standard line last year, the 1935 Standard line includes a 5-passenger Sedan, a De Luxe Sedan, and a Sedan Delivery for light commercial use.

Virtually the same performance is incorporated in the 1935 Standard as in the Master. The latter, however, departs distinctly from previous Chevrolets in striking advances of body design and trim. The engines, incorporating many improvements over the 1934 Master, are of the same size and design in both models, while in the chassis the chief difference is the presence in the Master of Chevrolet enclosed knee-action suspension, now entering its second year, improved in construction and operation.

Visually, the new Master retains only the characteristic outlines of the radiator, and the trade-mark on hub caps and radiator emblem, to indicate that it is of Chevrolet design. The V radiator is narrower and more sloping, the unit fenders are highly contoured, while the windshield not only slopes back steeply but also is slightly V-shaped, causing the forepart of the car to flow smoothly into the body which is beautifully streamlined. By utilizing the newly-developed all-steel roof [illegible] Chevrolet has attained a new sleekness [illegible] its crowned roof sweeping from windshield to the graceful [illegible] [illegible] the entire top.

EVERY DETAIL NEW

Every detail of the Master is new, starting with the front bumper and including the radiator grille, the ornament that supplants the radiator cap (now under the hood), the horizontal [illegible] the running board pattern, streamlined door handles, spare tire mountings (concealed in some models), tail lamp, and rear bumper. The wheelbase of the new Master is increased to 113 in., and greater body space has been achieved by moving the engine forward. The appearance of great length has been enhanced by lowering the floor level one [illegible]

All [illegible] models have integral trunks embodied in the rear panels, with compartments for the spare wheel. On De Luxe models pressed steel wheels with steel rounded spokes are regular equipment. Wire wheels with large hub caps are used on regular models.

In the lower-priced line of Standard models, larger bodies, a [illegible] engine with 23 per cent more horsepower, an improved chassis frame and numerous other new features give improved performance, better economy, and greater comfort and safety.

SPARK SETTING AUTOMATIC ON NEW DODGES

On the 1935 Dodge cars, the spark timing has been rendered so completely automatic as to make the [illegible] hand spark lever obsolete. A double spark control is provided, one by the action of the [illegible] the other by the [illegible] vacuum control [illegible] additional spark advance [illegible] throttle driving [illegible] to give the engine more spirited performance and to act as a fuel economy factor.

The export of Canadian butter which has fallen to a very low point amounted to 32,800 lbs., valued at $7,836, in December, compared with [illegible]6,800 lbs. at $18,113 the year before.

PATS and PANS by BILL LEWIS

Hockey fans will read with interest Referee A. Smith's version of what happened in that Boston game when Jimmy Ward suffered the injury to his head . . . Reports state he had collided with Eddie Shore and, as a result, crashed to the ice and suffered a severe concussion . . . Immediately there were revived the tales of Shore's accident with Ace Bailey . . . Reporters began to worry in their stories about what effect the injury to the Maroon star would have on Shore's playing . . . Now we come to the story of Mr. Smith, who refereed the game in which the incident occurred.

In Toronto last night, Smith said Shore was not even near the Montrealer when he was hurt and the injury came when Ward attempted to crash through between Red Beattie and Nels Stewart, losing his balance and falling to the ice . . . All of which shows how easily a person can be blamed for things he may be entirely innocent of.

Seattle Seahawks squared matters with Calgary last night when they whipped the southerners by 3-1 to make up for the loss they suffered Wednesday . . . It must have been quite a battle, according to reports, with plenty of work for Referee Amby Moran . . . Seahawks play Eskimos here tonight and they'll be trying to do the same thing to the locals to wipe out the brilliant 7-1 win of the Igloo-ers last Tuesday . . . Undoubtedly, Seattle will be a lot tougher to beat in this game for they've had about a week of Alberta weather now and have had a chance to become accustomed to the climate . . . Needless to say, they want to take more than two points out of a possible eight back with them from their current road trip.

Curlers and curling officials are getting all prepared for the annual bonspiel which takes place here the week of February 4 . . . Secretary McKee has announced that headquarters will open up next Wednesday and that the executive looks for a wonderful entry list this year.

Dr. W. G. Hardy and Clarence Campbell go to Calgary for a meeting of the Alberta Hockey association tomorrow at which provincial playdowns of the various divisions will be discussed . . . It won't be long now before the amateur playdowns are really underway.

It should provide a real opportunity to judge the strength of Canadians, leaders of the local junior league, when they meet senior Saskatoon Standards here a week from tonight . . . So far, Canucks have not tasted defeat this season and their supporters are confident they will do exceptionally well against the senior outfit.

TRIO ALREADY ARE ENTERED FOR BONSPIEL

Headquarters Will Open On Wednesday Next For Big Event

Three rinks have already sent in their entries for the annual bonspiel of the Alberta Curling Association, it was announced last night by Secretary George McKee. The 'spiel will start here on Monday, February 4.

Showing the widespread interest that is being taken in the local bonspiel this year, one entry comes from as far away as Winnipeg while both of the other entries received to date are also from out of town.

A. Lawson is bringing his rink from the Elmwood club in the Manitoba capital, while Dr. McBride is again coming with his rink from Hardisty. The Walker rink from Hanna is the other entry received to date.

Many local and out-of-town quartets have signified their intention of competing in the big event and one of the largest list of competitors in the history of the 'spiel is expected by the time entries close.

Secretary McKee also announced that bonspiel headquarters will be opened next Wednesday. They will be located this year at [illegible] street.

The December export of nickel from Canada was valued at $1,727,000, compared with $1,786,000 in December, 1933.

He Has Hard Job

St. Louis Eagles, who once were the historic Ottawa Senators, have been the hard-luck squad of the N.H.L. this season. Playing scraggy and determined hockey, they have missed many victories over more powerful clubs by the narrowest of margins. Bill Beveridge, who played with the Senators in Ottawa, has turned in some brilliant work between the posts, especially since rumors floated that he would be shifted some weeks ago. Young Beveridge has held his teammates up on several occasions by his fine goalkeeping.

Shore Exonerated By Referee Smith

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—Eddie Shore of Boston Bruins was not connected with the collision in the Boston Garden last Tuesday in which Jimmy Ward of Montreal Maroons was injured, Ag Smith, who refereed the game, said here Friday.

Smith, here to referee the National Hockey League game in Maple Leaf Gardens tonight, said: "Ward was trying to wedge between Stewart and Beattie of Boston. After getting through he was off balance and his feet went from under him and he fell, his head striking the ice. Shore was not near Ward at the time."

ESKS SEEKING TWO STRAIGHT OVER SEATTLE

Artful Arthur Hopes To Lead Eskimos Into Win Tonight

It was "Artful Arthur" Gagne who led Edmonton Eskimos into their great triumph last Tuesday, and again the brilliant playing manager will lead the Igloo-Dwellers against Seattle Seahawks at the Arena tonight, hopeful of taking their second straight win over the league-leading Hawk crew.

Last Tuesday Eskimos played one of their finest games since the strengthened club started on its winning drive, and with a pair of stiff drills under their belt are in great shape for Frank Foyston's fast skating Seahawk crew tonight.

The pace set by Eskimos in their last few games has been thrilling and a brace of points from a win tonight would look really great on the Eskimos present total. It would make their standing in the league look much brighter and would draw further ahead of the cellar occupants and much closer to the third place squad.

Eskimos will be at full strength tonight, not reporting any injuries following Tuesday's game. They have been drilling twice since last Tuesday and every player will be fighting hard for a winning mat[illegible]

Seattle, however, have gained their winning stride again, whipping Calgary last night and they will be a vengeance-seeking squad for the Esks to meet.

SOUTH SIDERS HOPE FOR WIN OVER CANUCKS

A's Are Serious Threats to Beat Leaders on Sunday

Having twice seriously threatened the league-leading Safeway-Canadians in the thrilling Junior Hockey League race, Pep Moon's South Side Athletics will be out to hand the Canucks their first defeat of the season when they clash at the Arena Sunday afternoon.

In two previous games the A's have been serious threats for the Canadians, having tied them in thrilling encounters, but Sunday they hope for a triumph over the orange and black squad. Should South Side triumph they will be the first team in the league to break the heads of the undefeated leaders.

Varsity Badminton Tournament Today

With some of the province's finest players competing, the University of Alberta Badminton tournament is scheduled to commence Saturday and continue Sunday and the early part of next week. Some of the outstanding athletes entered in various events are Peggy Aitker, Barbara Jarman, Nancy Steill, Guy Morton, Fraser Mitchell, Harry Cooper, Ken Clark, Bob Adamson and Bob Proctor.

Decision of the Varsity Students' Union executive to send a team representing the institution to the provincial tournament commencing at Calgary, Feb. 6, is providing a strong incentive touward championship play.

MIDGET SIXES BATTLE HARD IN TOP PLACE

E.A.C.'s and Maple Leafs Still Tied for Lead With Wins

The battle for the leadership of the City Midget Hockey League still remains in a deadlock, last night both the last year championship E.A.C. six and Henry White's Maple Leafs who have been undefeated this season turned in victories in the league fixtures. The Clubmen won their battle with Scona in convincing manner when they handed them a 10-0 drubbing while the Maple Leafs emerged victorious over Bennett Bulldogs by a 5-2 count. Frank Adby's Highlands Athletic club also continued their winning way when they scored a 3-1 victory over the Royal Canadians. The victory gave the Adby pucksters sole possession of second place in the league standings.

Turning in their most impuressive performance of the year, the last year titlists romped through their opponents to an easy victory. In the first period they drilled their opponents' net with four goals, came back with two in the second and went on to score four in the third. "Bud" Foley, Eric Beauchamp, "Cab" Kalloway and "Buzzer" Black each scored a pair of goals for the winners while Bob Carse and Hal O'Leary each scored one.

TOOK BIG LEAD

Early in the first period Foley placed the Clubmen in front when he scored on Tougas' assist and less than two minutes later Kalloway scored on an individual effort. Taking advantage of a weak defence Kalloway bore through to score his second goal midway through the session after converting Hogan's pass near the blue line, and just before the period ended Bob Carse placed the E.A.C.'s four up when he scored on a lone effort.

O'Leary started things going in the second period when he scored on Hogan's pass and late in the canto Foley increased the E.A.C. margin to six when he scored on a lone raid. Continuing where they left off in the second period the Moherites added another four markers in the final frame. Eric Beauchamp notched the first on a solo and the second on a pass from Tougas. Black scored the other two, one from Shamper's assist and the other from Foley's pass.

Breaking away on a lone raid early in the first period Ramsey gave the Highlands A.C. a one goal lead when he scored on a close in drive. The second session went scoreless and just as the third period opened Jack Simpson scored to place the teams on even footing. Raymond scored the winning counter on McAulley's pass late in the period and just before the game ended Roy McCann tallied on a lone thrust.

Timmins Fined and Many Penalties Meted Out to Both Teams

CALGARY, Jan. 26. — Seattle Seahawks got even for the 5-1 drubbing handed them Wednesday night with a 3-1 victory over Calgary in a Northwest Hockey League game here last night that was one bunch of squabbles from start to finish.

There was ill-feeling to start with and in the first few minutes of the game Stew Adams and Cam Proudlock were given five-minute penalties for fighting.

Roughhouse tactics continued until half way through the period Amby Moran, the referee, stopped the game and read the riot act to the players. It didn't do much good, though.

The second period saw seven more penalties handed out, two of them majors, and one minor and a $10 fine to Sam Timmins, Calgary goalkeeper.

DISALLOWS GOAL

Harold Tabor counted Seattle's first goal on a pass from Sammy McAdam. Early in the second Cooney Kunzman got what looked like the equalizer, but Moran said it hit the goal post. A new goal judge was called in.

McAdam and Johnny Houbregs scored Seattle's other pair and Chubby Scott saved Calgary from a shut-out with a goal in the third. There were loud complaints from Calgary about McAdam's goal. Gilhooly had dumped Scott while McAdam was rushing up the ice to score. Moran gave Gilhooly a five minute penalty and allowed the goal.

LINEUPS:

Seattle: Venne; Gilhooly and Houbregs; J. Sheppard, Proudlock and Whittles. Subs: Mullen, McAdam, Tabor and T. Hemmerling.

Calgary: Timmins; McFarlane and Pridham; Scott; Adams and Sande. Subs: Neville, Kunzman, F. Sheppard, Harris.

English Have 200 For Eight Wickets

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Jan 23—Fighting to overcome a weak start, the touring Marylebone Cricket Club of England had compiled a first inning score of 200 for eight wickets as stumps were drawn at the close of the second day of a four-day test match with West Indies. West Indies finished their first innings earlier Friday with a score of 302.

GRUNT, GROAN BILL CARDED NEXT FRIDAY

Double Main Event Card Scheduled in City For February 1

Another all-star double main event heavyweight wrestling card will be offered to Edmonton fans next Friday night, when Al Karasick, the "Russian Lion," will again strut his stuff, but this time with an opponent who (if names mean anything) will give Al all he is looking for.

Promoter Cutcher has picked for Al's opponent none other than the "Red Devil," a wrestler who has made the best of them step all over Canada and the United States as well as Australia and the Hawaiian Islands. The "Red Devil" is reputed to be just as rough, tough and mean as Satan himself and this being true should be right up Karasick's alley.

The other half of the feature event will bring together two more faces, new to Edmonton fans, in the persons of Tony Catalina and Joe Hubka.

Catalina hails from Chicago, and like all Chicago "bad men" is capable of taking care of himself in the fastest of company. Hubka is a farm boy from Nebraska, that state which has produced more good wrestlers than any other state or province on the North American continent.

In Calgary, Regina and Winnipeg where Hubka wrestled in 1933, promoters are high in their praise for Joe's wrestling ability and ring generalship, while promoters all over the southwestern states are just as high in their praise of Catalina and wrestlers who are capable of commanding those kind of recommendations must have the good.

University Hockey Squad Likely Enter Intermediate Play

Apparently through with local senior amateur competition as a result of arrangements made by league officials when a schedule was drafted, Alan Wilson's University of Alberta pucksters are planning to enter intermediate league playdowns.

With inter-city competition in prospect in early winter, senior league officials decided that the team standing in last place on Jan. 24 would drop out of further competition. Undeniably trailing the Superiors and Dominions, at present tied for league leadership, the Varsity team is forced to seek new fields of activity.

Coach Wilson expects the intercollegite series with University of Saskatchewan to be partially played within the next two weeks.

TWO HARD FOUGHT GAMES IN COMMERCIAL LEAGUE

Tiger Six Whips Welders; LaSalle Defeated By Yale

Cellar Occupants Give Second Place Squad Big Surprise

Saskatoon Welders' big chance of breaking away from the second place tie with La Salle Club in the northern section of the Commercial Hockey League went astray last night when they bowed in defeat to Bush Mine Tigers by a 4-2 score in the first game of the twin card at the Arena. In the second game Yale Cafe further increased its lead with a 5-1 triumph over La Salle Club in the other end of the twin bill.

Pete Elock's brace of goals, one in the first and the other in the second period, paced the Tigers into their triumph over the Welders. Elock played a smart game for the winners throughout.

COMMANDING LEAD

After Elock had placed the Tigers two in front, Soley, assisted by Jinks placed the Tigers three ahead.

Morgan rapped home Horn's pass a few minutes later for Welders' first tally, but the Miners scored their sixth goal six minutes after when Melnyk beat Cameron for an unassisted goal. Welders closed the scoring at the 18-minute mark in the final period when Love rapped in Morgan's pass.

Two goals in the first and last periods with one in the sandwich session gave Yale a comfortable margin to whip LaSalle Club in the second game of the doubleheader.

CAMPBELL STARTED IT

Campbell, assisted by Smith got the first Yale goal and before the period ended Thompson completed Esdale's play with a good goal.

Lunde and Innes teamed up for Yale's second period goal. Lunde was on the scoring end, but it was Innes' timely pass that paved the way for the marker.

LaSalle Club notched their only point of the game as Stewart rapped the rigging on McGreevy's pass.

Chess

(Official Weekly Game of the Edmonton Chess Club)

Before leaving the nineteenth century there are some masters of its later years who deserve attention. One of the most remarkable was Harry Nelson Pillsbury, born in the United States in 1872. When only twenty-two he won first prize in an international tournament, in which the greatest masters of that time participated, including Steinitz and Lasker. He died at the early age of thirty-three.

Elizabeth Chambers and Ralph McCreath of the Toronto club were adjudged the winners of the junior pairs event.

Winners of the ladies' singles event, which was held yesterday, will be announced today.

- NEWEST EQUIPMENT
- NEWEST DECORATIONS
- NEWEST PATRON COMFORTS
- AND NEWEST UP-TO-THE MINUTE DISPENSING FACILITIES

Combining not only the most modern equipment in parlor appliances, but special selection has been made in assuring the highest degree of patron comforts. The result of this combination is a marvelous achievement to say the least, having created an unusually bright atmosphere that duplicates the finest in Canada. The women's exclusive compartment in connection, is unquestionably the finest in the City.

The honors of the fine furnishings go to the T. Eaton Co. Limited, who were called upon to supply the furnishings.

Kelvinator got the bid for the high degree of refrigeration equipment that was required

Armitage-McBain Lumber Co. materials used in the interior trims, indeed are a credit to any hotel

Of course J. P. Fitzgerald Plumbing and Heating Co. was the bid for the piping engineering

The important wiring and lighting features that have created such an atmosphere in this hotel, went to Thornton & Newman, electrical engineers

A New Warmth of Hospitality at the

YORK HOTEL

Furnishings do not 'make' the hostelry, any more than clothes make the man — yet just how important they are, in creating a comfortable atmosphere, is proven at the new Hotel York.

We're just a little bit proud of the 'atmosphere' that the new EATON furnishings create at the York. The stick fibre arm chairs, with their cheery red fabrikoid seats; the Bentwood chairs; the glossy inlaid linoleum flooring; the curtains and draperies.

WATT, MURRAY MEET IN FINALS

MONTREAL, Jan. 26. — Laird Watt, youthful member of Canada's Davis Cup team of last year, and his chum Bob Murray, Canadian intercollegiate and Quebec champion, will face each other here today in the final match for the Canadian covered tennis championship left undefended by Francis X. Shields, New York. Murray beat Bill Aydelotte, Schenectady, N.Y., star, in a three-hour semi-final singles match here Friday, and Watt gained the final with a victory over Charlie Leslie, another Montrealer.

Tulsa Beaten

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 26—Oklahoma City Warriors defeated the league-leading Tulsa Oilers 2-1 in an American Association hockey game before a packed house here last night. The Warrior victory was the first over the Tulsa team this season.

Flying Fools Win First Provincial Series' Cage Tilt

In the initial game of the provincial basketball season locally, "Y" Flying Fools carried off their first official encounter with the junior Livewires, also of the "Y," by a count of 44 to 32. The game, played in McDougall school gym, was a speedy affair with the winners pouring in the shots from all angles like a well oiled machine when they hit their stride.

These teams meet again next week in the second of a three-out-of-five series. This game is timed for nine o'clock in McDougall school gym.

Varsity second string hoopers dropped a friendly encounter with the "Y" Hawks by the long odds of 42 to 18, in the second game of the evening.

Referees for both games were Harold Snyder and Allan McTavish.

The next fixtures in the "Y" league are slated for next Wednesday night with Short Circuits opposing Apaches at 8:00 o'clock and Flying Fools trying to take the measure of the senior Redskins at 9:00.

Fix-Up Time Is Coming

. . . and this Spring promises to be the most active season in years for tending to those big and little jobs around the house. Remodeling and repairing will soon be in full swing and you'll surely want your home kept up with the rest. Early planning will save you time and money.

HI-School -Lights ON SPORT

By CHARLES TODD

Both hockey games scheduled for last night were played despite the fact that the players almost got snowed in. Snow was so deep on Technical's home ice that the contest had to be played at Separate, where things were almost as bad. The lads should be given a hand for getting out and playing the game when they could just as well sat back and hollered for a postponement.

McDougall Commercial's junior puck squad crashed the win column for the first time in three starts when they humbled Eastwood 2-0 last night in a hectic game on a snow-covered sheet.

Geddis stepped into the role of hero for the Commercialites when he banged in both counters.

Trailing 4-1 in the last period, Technical's senior puckchasers staged one of the greatest comebacks of the season to tie things up at 4-4 with Separate last night. Both squads walked off the ice satisfied with the single point they had earned for the contest.

Kelly of the Separate crew helped himself to two scoring points, tallying their first goal and passing the disc to Beauchamp for number three. Beauchamp also scored one on a solo effort, adding two points also to his scoring. Folly batted in the other marker.

LINEUPS

Technical—Hodgkinson, Flett, Howey, Brown, Stuart, Collier, Thresher, Mays, M. Mather, Maurice Mather, Wilson, Clark.

MAROONS SIGN MONCTON STAR

Girls Play Pair Of Hoop Tilts

Uncorking a belated scoring drive, National Home Furnishers won the opening encounter of the City Girls' Basketball league last night when they eked out a 48-47 victory over the Eagles at the Sunnydale pavilion. In the second gam ethe Spruce Grove cagers had little difficulty in registering a 34-15 victory over the Dodgers.

SUMMARY:

Eagles: Melnyk (17), Killick, Oliver (13), Wyonychuk (7), McArthur, Barrett (4), Mo[illegible], total 47.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD
by William Ferguson
The HORNBILLS
THESE COMICAL APPEARING BIRDS ARE FOUND IN AFRICA, ASIA, AND THE EAST INDIES. THEY HAVE ONE OF THE MOST PECULIAR OF ALL NESTING CUSTOMS! THE MALE BIRD SEALS HIS MATE INSIDE A HOLLOW TREE, WHERE SHE REMAINS UNTIL THE FAMILY IS RAISED.
THE IMPRISONED FEMALE MOLTS ALL HER FEATHERS, AND GROWS NEW ONES, DURING HER STAY IN THE DARK FOUL-SMELLING CELL.
A SMALL OPENING IS LEFT IN THE TREE CAVITY, AND THROUGH THIS THE MALE PASSES FOOD TO HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN! BY THE TIME THE FAMILY IS RAISED, HE IS THIN AND RUN DOWN, FROM OVERWORK.
THE GROUND HORNBILLS DO NOT PRACTICE THIS CUSTOM, BUT LAY THEIR EGGS ON THE GROUND.
EVEN THE GIANT MONITOR LIZARD FINDS IT DIFFICULT TO ROB THE HORNBILL'S NEST, AND ANY SNAKE THAT IS SMALL ENOUGH TO ENTER IS EATEN BY THE MOTHER BIRD.

HAHA! YOU MISSED ME! YOU COULDN'T HIT ANYTHING!!
T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
LISTEN, YOU KIDS, I'M THE NEW COP ON THIS BEAT! MY NAME IS WARTLE, AND I'M NOT GONNA LET YOU GET AWAY WITH THINGS, LIKE MILLIGAN DID!
NOW, IF I HAVE TO SPEAK TO YOU AGAIN, YOU'LL BE SORRY... SCRAM!!
GOSH, THE HEAVIEST SNOWFALL OF THE YEAR, AND WE CAN'T HAVE ANY FUN!
IF WE GO COASTING, WE CAN'T HURT ANYTHING!
IT WOULD BE JUST OUR LUCK TO HIT THAT GUY!!
FIRST YOU HAD PEOPLE FALLING DOWN ON YOUR ICE POND... THEN THE SNOWBALLS, AND NOW THIS!!
IF YOU'LL LET US GO THIS TIME, YOU'LL NEVER BE BOTHERED BY US AGAIN!
THIS'LL BE OUR SNOW FORT... AND WHILE WE'RE IN IT, WE WON'T BOTHER ANYONE!!
WE'LL PUSH MOM'S CLOTHESPOLE UP THROUGH THE SNOW, FOR A FLAG POLE, FOR OUR FORT! BUT FIRST, I'LL WRITE A NOTE, AND STICK IT ON FOR MR. WARTLE!
IT MUST BE AT LEAST EIGHT FEET TO THE TOP OF THE SNOW! GIMME A LIFT, AND WE'LL PUSH THE POLE THROUGH!
IS THE NOTE ON IT?
YEAH, I WRAPPED IT AROUND THE POLE, SO'S IT WOULDN'T TEAR, GOING THROUGH THE SNOW!
I GUESS MR WARTLE WILL BE GLAD WE'RE OUT OF HIS WAY.... GEE, THIS POLE PUSHES AWFULLY HARD!

OLD PERSIAN JOKE ABOUT A CHICKEN CROSSING A ROAD, OR SOMETHING OIL UP YOUR EARMUFFS, AND I'LL TELL YOU WHY I CAN'T WORK ANYMORE! —WELL, SIR —YEARS AGO I WAS AN EXPERT COIN BITER IN A SCOTCH BANK!
A COIN BITER?
YES!—AND AFTER YEARS OF COIN BITING, I HAD TO RESIGN ON ACCOUNT OF LEAD POISONING!
YOU OUGHT TO HEAR HOW FUNNY MY PIANO SOUNDS, NOW!—I SENT THE STRINGS OUT TO BE TUNED!

HAW—THERE'S JUST ENOUGH OF THAT ROAST CHICKEN LEFT, FOR ME TO ENJOY A MIDNIGHT SNACK, EGAD!
T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
UM-BOY—I JUST REMEMBERED THERE WAS JUST ENOUGH OF THAT SWELL ROAST CHICKEN LEFT, FOR ME TO PUT TH' SNATCH ON, AFTER EVERYBODY HAS HIT TH' HUSKS!
HM-COLD CHICKEN AND A BOTTLE OF BEER —HAW— EGAD, I WONDER IF BUSTER HAS DESIGNS ON THAT LEFT-OVER FOWL? I'LL HAVE TO WATCH HIM!
SAY—I'LL BET TH' MAJOR HAS AN OPTION ON THAT BIRD, TOO! —HAVE TO KEEP AN EYE ON HIM!
THE EVENING PASSES ON AND WE COME TO THE HOUR OF MIDNIGHT
HO-WAW—TIME TO RETIRE, BUSTER! UM-M—WAWP— ATE SO MUCH AT DINNER, I'VE BEEN DROWSY ALL THE EVENING!
YEH, GUESS I'LL CHECK IN, TOO!
I'LL GO UP WITH HIM, AN' THEN SLIP DOWN IN A FEW MINUTES!
EE-GAD, I THOUGHT HE'D NEVER GO UP!—HAW— NOW FOR THAT DELICIOUS CHICKEN!
HE SAID HE ATE TOO MUCH FOR DINNER, SO THAT CINCHES TH' CHICKEN FOR ME!
OH-AHP—IS THAT YOU, BUSTER? UM-P KAFF-KAFF—I AH— UM-ER-THAT IS-AH I—ER-
YEH-I SEE! WELL, YOU'LL SPLIT HALF WITH ME!
WHY MARTHA, M'DEAR! AH—WAS THERE SOMETHING YOU—AH. HEH— HEH-
OH-AH- ULP— HELLO, MRS. HOOPLE!
HMF—SO!—YOU TWO ICE BOX ROBBERS!
NOW, THEN—HAND OVER THAT CHICKEN!
CHICKEN?? WHY—AH— OH, YOU MEAN THE CHICKEN?
YOU SEE, I'VE HAD AN ELECTRICIAN WIRE THE ICE BOX, SO THAT WHEN YOU LUNKS ATTEMPT A RAID, AND OPEN THE ICE BOX DOORS, A WARNING BUZZER SOUNDS UP IN MY ROOM!

WOW! WHAT A SNOWSTORM. HEAVIEST DRIFTS I'VE EVER SEEN.
WELL, I SAVED MYSELF A LOT OF SHOVELIN', BY JUST DIGGIN' A TUNNEL FROM THE FRONT DOOR. SMART GUY! THAT'S ME! NOBODY ELSE WOULD THINK OF THAT!
GEE! I'M LUCKY THE SNOW PLOW'S BEEN ALONG! I CAN HIKE TO THE STORE FOR SOME GROCERIES.
MY GOSH! WHICH ONE IS MINE?

OH, FER GOSH SAKES! WHADYA WANT? ALLUS WANTIN' SUMPN.
T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
COME ON, THEN, IF YOU WANT OUT, C'MON!
NOW, STAY OUT AWHILE, AN' LET ME REST!
YOW-O-O-O-OOO
OH, GOOD NIGHT! NOW HE WANTS IN AGAIN!
YOU MAKE ME TIRED—LAY DOWN, NOW, AN' KEEP QUIET, ER I'LL GIVE YOU A GOOD WHACK!
DON'T BE SO ILL TEMPERED. TRY TO FIND OUT WHAT HE WANTS.
HE WANTS SUMPN TO EAT. AN' I AIN'T GONNA GIVE HIM SUMPN, AN' GET BAWLED OUT, CUZ IT WAS FOR SUPPER, ER SUMPN.
OH, YOU'RE TREATED TERRIBLE, AREN'T YOU! THERE'S A PIECE OF STEW MEAT IN THE REFRIGERATOR. GIVE HIM THAT.
GOOD NIGHT! THAT'S TOO SMALL, HE'LL GOBBLE THAT DOWN AN' BE HOLLERIN' FER MORE, AFTER ONE GULP.
BUT I GOT A IDEA FER THAT.
NOW, DON'T WORRY, YOU'LL GET IT ALL—AND HOW!
I'LL HAVE TO PUT A BOWL OVER TH' TOP TO KEEP HIM OUTA THERE.

IT'S SURE LUCKY YOU GOT TH' ROOF ALL FIXED 'FORE TH' BIG SNOW CAME-YES- WE'RE MIGHTY WARM AND SNUG HERE-
SUPPOSE A LOT OF PEOPLE WOULD BE DISSATISFIED- NO ELECTRICITY, BUT WE HAVE A LANTERN- NO RUNNING WATER, BUT A FINE WELL-SHUX- I THINK THIS IS SWELL- WHAT ARE YOU MAKIN' NOW?
THOUGHT I'D PUT UP SOME MORE SHELVES- NEVER HAVE TOO MANY SHELVES-
IF WE ONLY HAD A LOT O' STUFF TO PUT ON THE SHELVES- EH, "DADDY"?
WELL, I'VE HAD A FEW ODD JOBS AND I'M FINDING MORE WORK ALL THE TIME- I'LL SOON HAVE OUR SHELVES WELL STOCKED-
WHAT'S UP?
GR-R-O-OW!
WHOA?
WHY, SANDY!
YI-I-I-I-!
LEAPIN' LIZARDS! I NEVER SAW SANDY ACT LIKE THAT BEFORE- IF I DIDN'T KNOW HIM SO WELL, I'D FIGGER HE WAS SCARED-
SOME TRAMP PROWLING AROUND, MAYBE- QUICK- WE'LL SOON KNOW-
HM-M-M- GUESS SANDY MUST HAVE BEEN MISTAKEN-
I DON'T SEE ANYBODY, BUT SANDY COULDN'T HAVE BEEN MISTAKEN- HE SAW SOMETHING-
HEY! LOOK! TH' TRACKS OF A GIANT!
HO! HO! PROBABLY SOME LITTLE RUNT WITH OVERSHOES TOO BIG FOR HIM-
THEY'RE NOT OVERSHOE TRACKS AND NO RUNT EVER SUNK INTO TH' SNOW THAT DEEP- GEE- HE'S BEEN LOOKIN' IN OUR WINDOW-
WELL, WHOEVER IT WAS, HE'S GONE NOW-
YEAH- BUT A GUY THAT BIG COULD WALK RIGHT THROUGH THIS DOOR, BAR AND ALL, I BETCHA-
SANDY'S STILL BUG-EYED AND SORT O' SHAKIN'- I WON'T SAY HE'S REALLY SCARED- BUT I'M SCARED- WHO EVER 'TWAS, HE'S A GIANT AND I'LL BET HE'LL BE BACK-
(MUSTN'T LET ON THAT I AGREE WITH HER-) HA! HA! HA! WELL, ANYWAY WE SHOULD BE ABLE TO OUT-RUN ANYBODY WITH FEET THAT BIG-
